*Two roads diverged in a yellow wood,
And sorry I could not travel both
And be one traveler, long I stood
And looked down one as far as I could
To where it bent in the undergrowth;*

*Then took the other, as just as fair,
And having perhaps the better claim,
Because it was grassy and wanted wear,
Though as for that the passing there
Had worn them really about the same,*

*And both that morning equally lay
In leaves no step had trodden black.
Oh, I kept the first for another day!
Yet knowing how way leads on to way,
I doubted if I should ever come back.*

*I shall be telling this with a sigh
Somewhere ages and ages hence:
Two roads diverged in a wood, and I—
I took the one less traveled by,
And that has made all the difference.*

ROBERT FROST

A SIMPLE ROAD SIGN may point the traveler to Winston-Salem and through the maze of traffic to Wake Forest. Symmetrically arranged on a five hundred and forty-nine acre tract, the sixteen neo-Georgian buildings, too new to be covered with ivy, comprise the physical college.

Twenty-four hundred undergraduates, individuals in taste, background, interests and aspirations form the nucleus of the Wake Forest personality. Our lives, prior to the period of orientation as freshmen have been quite different, our influences diversified, our paths of interest divergent. Four years filled with the traditions and struggle for growth of a small Southern Baptist college will give a certain sameness to the individuals here.

APART FROM THE TOGETHERNESS

of the crowds in Slater's pit, the mass of cheering fans at a home game, the lines making the Tuesday-Thursday trek to Wait, or the impersonal atmosphere of the classroom, we seek identity in the smaller group, fulfillment of personal goals, a niche for our individuality.

Whether the path be athletics or theatre, the decision an academic one or a personal one, the choice right or wrong, we learn to stand alone. We select and reject. We move forward and sometimes backward. We grow and develop through choice. The broad path of the crowd is well-worn and comfortable while that of the individual is narrow and more difficult. The choice is ours and the difference is in the choice.

Freshman Paul Cale learns the routine of Wake Forest quickly—attending chapel, meeting suitemates, taking tests and exchanging ideas with fellow students.

They Call It Orientation. They say it's good for you. It happens to all freshmen at every school, they say.

The nauseous fear deep inside . . . and tests and tests and tests and . . . "My name's Jane, what's yours?" . . . and tests and tests and . . . bull sessions into all hours of the night . . . and tests . . .

But it's different here. It's uniquely Wake Forest here.

They learn that "one out of three won't graduate" . . . "less than half will have a C average this semester" . . . freshman biology will be your first F or maybe freshman English."

And the annual pre-school retreat at Camp Hanes . . . Slater and the hazards of the Pit . . . the hurry up and wait of registration, with its mountains of computer cards.

"Lead On, Oh King Eternal," another class has become members of the Wake Forest family.

Juniors Ed Hallman and Celie McAdams lead a discussion as Orientation leaders.

Registration fills two hectic days of closed out courses and bad breaks before classes can begin.

Seen through any perspective, Wait Chapel is the symbol and the essence of Wake Forest College.

THE ESSENCE OF WAKE FOREST . . .

is to be found in the bi-weekly chapel programs . . . the Baptist State Convention . . . the Reynolda Hall administrative offices. . . .

or perhaps in the excitement of a victory-happy, toilet-paper-draped campus; a lonely study room; or the solitary beauty of a moon-lit plaza.

Twenty-seven hundred students are the essence of Wake Forest. Individuals forming a brief community, then moving on—each separate but part of the whole—creating an ever changing yet constant institution—continuing the “noble name” and “glorious fame” of Wake Forest.

To better inform students in matters of administrative concern, Admissions Director Stallings, Chaplain Hollingsworth, and Dean Wilson answer questions posed by Butch Pate in a special chapel forum.

In the Wake tradition, victory on the field may later spell disaster for yardmen and students alike.

In a city where rain comes as often as sunshine, Deacons frequently are treated to the beauty of a misty-wet plaza.

Parents display a touch of sadness in realizing that their "little boys" have finally come of age.

Their First Visit. The parents converged, and the campus really put out to receive them during Freshman Parents' Weekend. Co-chairmen Miriam Early and Jim Martin, backed by their committee, planned a full Saturday centered around the V.P.I. football game that afternoon. Following the student example, the parents shared in the homelike sun, noise, and excitement of Bowman Gray Stadium. Parents saw other aspects of campus life through class visitation and a Coffee Hour during which faculty members were introduced, and an afternoon barbecue which brought the parents themselves together. Introductions were completed that evening when the parents met college administrative officials.

The weekend was concluded with . . .

A Real Carnival!

Sponsored by the Junior Class and organized by chairman Dayna Tate, the Carnival came complete with cotton candy, dancing girls, and games of chance. (Imagine!) During the four hour event the parents, students, and general public could shoot basketball, watch a variety show, or buy home made cakes—all for the price of a ticket, of course. Each fraternity and society, and most other campus organizations sponsored a booth, and half of the profit of these booths, a total of $425, went toward the stadium fund. The event climaxed a hectic Parent's Day with humor, and initiated a new tradition at Wake Forest.

December brought the spirit of Christmas to Wake Forest, together with quizzes and term papers. Christmas trees seemed to spring from nowhere to decorate the campus, and the normally drab dormitory halls burst forth into original displays of color and design. The sounds of Christmas were heard everywhere, as carols were piped into the cafeteria and the choir presented its annual Vesper Service. But beneath all the sights and sounds of the season, there lay a spirit—a spirit of giving of one's self and a spirit of caring for others.

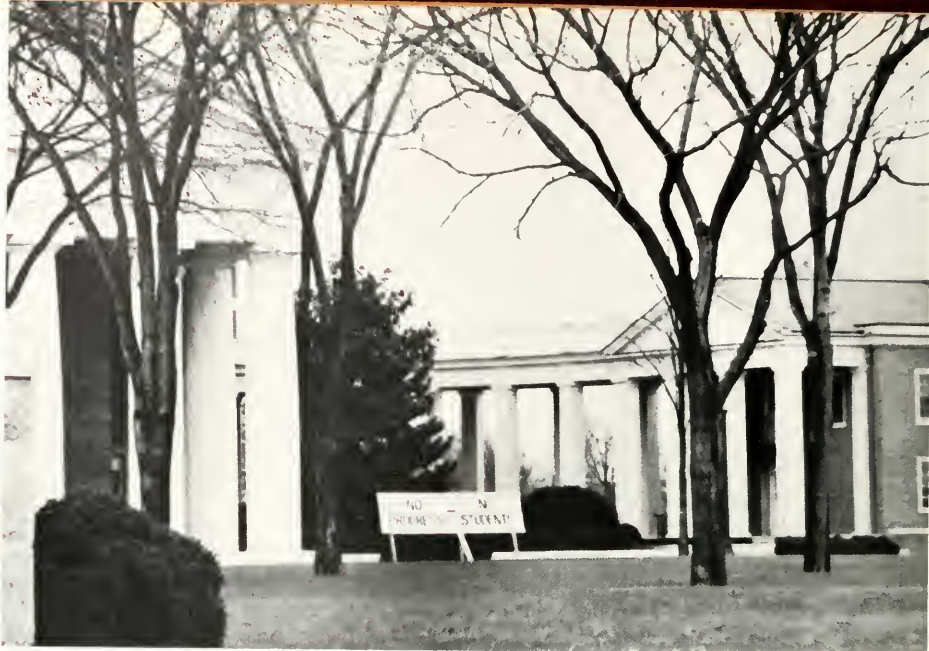

It was this spirit which characterized Christmas at Wake Forest. Students, through their participation in campus and community activities, found numerous ways to express this feeling. Parties were held for the underprivileged, caroling trips were made, and puppies were given homes. When vacation started, almost every student had begun in some manner to celebrate Christmas.

Christmas, then, provided us with a path of color and sound, a spirit of giving, a time for caring.

Student Government's annual party for underprivileged children brought much Christmas cheer to Wake students, but the happy faces of tots with books, stockings and stuffed lions indicates that children cannot be outdone.

November 13, 1963—The plaza took on the appearance of ancient ruins as students observed an hour of silence, protesting Baptist rejection of a college proposal for selecting trustees, effectively delaying university "status." A crushing new rejection in 1964 caused President Tribble to pledge a move to the future "one way or another."

Two Decades After

a dream to make Wake Forest a national university waked up that hamlet near Raleigh, the Board of Trustees made the dream more real by changing the College's name to Wake Forest University.

The dream from 1946 to 1966 was unlike Rip Van Winkle's. From the moment the decision was made to move the College from its sandy, magnolia-covered campus down East to the red clay Piedmont in search of the Reynolds millions, Wake Forest has been synonymous with progress.

To many of her sons and daughters and to the old-timers, changing a name was hardly worth noticing. For years the College has been a university with its medical school, law school, business school, and school of arts and sciences. All it has needed to make it the classical university is a school of theology. It is probable that this school is forthcoming.

It takes more than a Board of Trustees meeting to change the history of a College over a century old. What it does take is twenty years of progress, then twenty more. Progress hasn't been easy. Progress steps on the toes of those who want to walk slowly, and stepping on toes often hurts feelings as well as feet. Wake Forest's transition was a transition of people as well as buildings, and the transition has not yet ceased. Controversies have made the dream toss and turn, yet it has not been forgotten. As one goal is attained, dreaming will begin for others. Education is progress and progress is dreaming. Wake Forest is education.

January 13, 1967—After two years of peace with the Baptists, college trustees declared that Wake Forest had become a university. Student reaction was calm but joyous, and the architect of it all, President Tribble, prepared to retire to a less demanding role.

Outstanding professors and small classes are an integral part of the Wake intellectual atmosphere. Dr. Robert Johnson (right) explains calculus theory to an ever-more-talented group of entering freshmen. Below, Professor Bynum Shaw leads a seminar on the History of American Journalism.

Although seminar size classes, dynamic professors and excellent facilities can spark the intellectual climate, the heart of the college experience is still to be found in the mind of the individual student.

With the omnipresent chapel in the background, students enter the modern Humanities Building for classes.

FROM HUMBLE BEGINNINGS . . .

Wake Forest has matured to near university status . . .

Its students are increasingly more capable; its faculty, facilities, and opportunities expanding . . .

Constant growing pains increase awareness of the position the college is assuming . . .

Yet, throughout, there remains a constant attitude . . . the intellectual attitude inherited from generations molded in the Wake Forest tradition and passed on by craftsmen . . . the attitude eagerly sought, respectfully guarded, and faithfully preserved . . . the attitude which is the basis for all academic endeavor.

Right: Roger Rollman coils away from his domineering wife, Flora Hoffman, as she becomes enraged because he has given shelter to his sister and her new-found baby.

Below: An Ironshirt questions Grusha in order to find the whereabouts of the infant son of the beheaded Governor.

As a monk addresses the wedding guests, variations in the set design can be seen in the background, where projected scenery takes the place of an elaborate set, forcing attention on the characters and the simple foreground furnishings.

College Theatre. Bertolt Brecht's "The Caucasian Chalk Circle" received such acclaim and popularity with the audiences that it was held over for additional performances and easily became the Theatre's highlight of the year.

The play was different, and this had much to do with its success. The raw stage design's simplicity was complimented with overhead projectors casting scenes on a plain backdrop. Colorful costumes and masks added their own special touch to the action.

Martin Bennison, director of the play, used Brecht's "alienation effect" to its fullest advantage by having sets changed in plain view of the audience and by having his actors abruptly step out of character to deliver sudden personal thoughts in their own voices to the audience.

The "Chalk Circle" will probably be remembered by its viewers as being Wake Forest's most daring play due to its bold use of imagery and language.

Crusha, a servant girl played by Marsha Cannada, discovers the Georgian Governor's infant son, who had been left behind in the palace during the royal family's escape from the Russian city.

George Lincoln Rockwell entertained a large circus-style audience with his marathon speech on Zionism and Bolshevism. The American Nazi Commander received his most hostile reception of the year in his deepest penetration of the South, as he was met by American flags and the imposing figure of football player Robert Grant.

Socialist Norman Thomas discusses foreign policy with American History Professor Howell Smith.

Senator William Proxmire, a member of the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, discusses "The Future of American Economic Policy."

Dick Gregory, who says that his jokes make his money, proved himself an articulate social critic in a banquet speech.

Challenge '67. The Wake Forest Symposium on Contemporary World Affairs opened the month of March with a distinguished assortment of experts and critics to discuss "The Implications of Prosperity." Assumed this year as a permanent biennial project of the student government, Challenge continued its tradition of intellectual stimulation, and brought prestige to the new university.

This year's program brought to the campus such eminent economists as Dr. James Buchanan of the University of Virginia, and the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Commerce, Dr. Edward Smith. Seminars were held on "The New Economics," "The Government vs. Business vs. Labor," and "The Future of American Economic Policy." Major lecturers included Socialist Norman Thomas, social critic Dick Gregory, the vociferous and controversial head of the American Nazi Party, George Lincoln Rockwell, Mutual News's Washington correspondent Craig Spence, and NBC's "Man in Washington," Herbert Kaplow.

The Performing Arts attained a new high level of popularity at Wake Forest this year with the appearance of world famous pianist Artur Rubenstein, a highly acclaimed young baritone, and an equally promising young violinist. Even though his concert was scheduled for the first week of winter exams, Mr. Rubenstein played to a near capacity crowd in Wait Chapel. Acclaimed by Time magazine as "the world's greatest living pianist," the Polish artist thrilled his audience with selections from Beethoven, Schumann, Chopin and others. Earlier in the year, violinist Itzhak Perlman, winner of the Leventritt Award in 1964, and baritone John Shirley-Quirk performed for evening chapel audiences.

From a gay mood to one of melancholy, Perlman's artistry both delighted and entertained.

NBC political correspondent Sander Vanocur challenged students to review Viet Nam policy in light of the country's strategic importance to the U.S. in an October speech.

Comedian and columnist Art Buchwald entertained his audience with light-hearted solutions to problems from college admissions to the Viet Nam war.

The College Union Lecture Series gave the student at Wake Forest an enjoyable way to become better informed about the world in which he lives. Noted columnists, commentators, and authors were brought periodically to the campus by the College Union and spoke to near-capacity audiences composed of both students and townspeople. The series opened with Sander Vanocur of NBC News, who presented his views on the Viet Nam War and the United States as a world power. He was followed by Art Buchwald, who, in a lighthearted way, presented his solutions to all of the world's problems. On a more serious note, Valery Tarsis, the brilliant Russian author, told of his defiance of the Soviet Government and his efforts to declare his devotion to freedom. In February, the spotlight was focused on China, as Dr. Han Suyin told of her travels and "The Many Faces of Asia." Finally, in April, Henry Steele Commager spoke on his views about America's place in the world today. With such a wide variety of speakers and topics, the College Union once again provided Wake Forest a chance to play a significant role in a modern world.

in the anonymous and hurried lines of Slater's cafe, in the informal buzz that is the Tavern,
in the hectic after-party hours at Staley's;

In crowds . . .

from a CU lecture to an IFC dance;

And cliques . . .

from a coffee house gathering to a fraternity party.

The social atmosphere of Wake Forest is formed. That atmosphere, eagerly sought by freshmen—unhurriedly accepted by seniors—is the informal tie that binds the Wake Forest Family.

Although the crowds at the game differ from those at the chapel, the party, the library, or the "pit," there is a continuity in the social atmosphere which is the basis of the Wake tradition.

Sigma Chi's Forrest Hollifield and Tom Ginn extol the virtues of their fraternity to rushee Frank Beck.

Some Men are Fraternity Men.

Because they are Greeks they have parties, often as individual fraternities and occasionally as an inter-fraternity group. Individually they have combo parties, record parties, costume parties, and beach parties. They join as a group for Mid-Winters and Greek Week concerts and dances. They have fun.

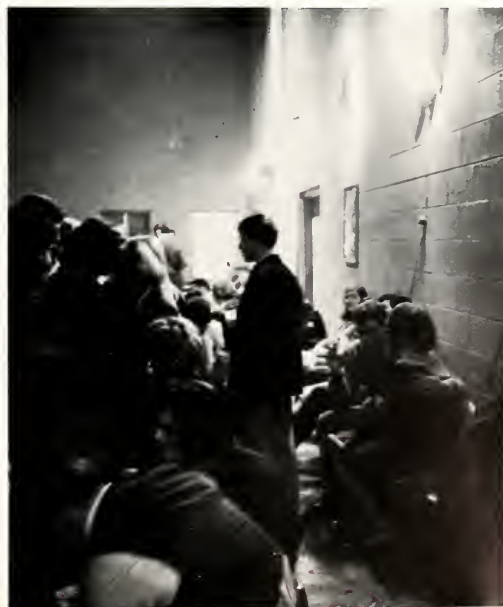

Because they are Greeks they are in competition. Each fraternity competes with all the others during rush. Each battles the other in intramural sports and they vie during Homecoming and Greek Week. They are always trying for the top spot.

Because they are Greeks they are close. They party, work, and play with fraternity brothers. They date, study, eat and live together. Each fraternity is a unit, different from others and varied within itself, and each Greek respects that unity and variety.

They are fraternity men by choice.

Entertainers. Although the College Union was constantly troubled by cancellations of major singing groups throughout the year, Major Functions and Small Socials Committee chairmen Steve Kelley and Sam Gladding did an outstanding job of recruiting top entertainers to appear on the Wake campus. Homecoming brought Barbara Lewis and Bobby Moore and the Rhythm Aces, but the big name groups came during the spring.

Appearing on Challenge weekend in March, the Serendipity Singers delighted their audience with folk tunes and ballads. Also appearing in the spring were The Four Seasons and The Association, as well as the nationally famous piano duet of Ferrante and Teicher.

Homecoming. The word filled the autumn air with excitement as Wake Forest prepared for the first big weekend of the year. Amateur artists of the fraternities and dorms contributed to the prevailing atmosphere as they sought to transform the neo-Georgian architecture of the campus into graphic representations of the fate of the Clemson Tigers. Less mindful of such violence, fifteen of Wake's prettiest coeds presented themselves to the student body, each hoping to become Miss Demon Deacon for 1966. The week ended in a flurry of activity as the decorations sprang miraculously into place. Homecoming 1966 was under way.

First place in overall campus decorations went to the "Big Red" of Theta Chi.

Kappa Sigma's "Deacon Safari" added some color to the campus scene.

A sunny day, a happy alumnus, a fraternity flower, and the game begins.

The changing faces in a crowded mob proved to be the "sign of the times" for Deacon football hypes. Alumni, players and students watch excitedly as the gridders rally and catch up with Clemson, but trouble threatens at the close of the game.

The Deacons played hard and well against the highly rated Tigers, but a last second safety gave the visitors a 23-21 victory.

Traditionally, Saturday's activities centered around the football game and the dance, both of which turned out to be somewhat disappointing. After outplaying Clemson for almost the entire game, the Deacons, unwilling to settle for a tie, made one last attempt to score, and gave up a safety to a suddenly alert Tiger defense.

At the evening extravaganza, students jammed Winston's Farmers Market anticipating a repeat of last year's big success. The Coasters, however, failed to appear, and Barbara Lewis and Bobby Moore and his Rhythm Aces were decidedly below par. The spirits of most were undampened, though, as Homecoming is always more than a football game or a dance. It generates a unique spirit of welcoming returning friends, of enthusiasm, of anticipation, of belonging. For alumni it is a path of return to a fraternity house, a dorm, a friend, or a memory.

A President's message to students, 1967

A college career resembles in some respects a location on a road map. There are many roads that lead to it and many that lead from it. Some of these roads are well known and heavily traveled, and others are little known and infrequently used. But all were designed for travel, and with wise planning all may be used to reach worthy destinations.

When we browse through the HOWLER in the years to come we shall retrace on memory's map the journeys that converged for us on the Wake Forest campus, the friendships that were a vital part of the college experience, and especially the journeys of learning that led to acquaintance with truth and communion with the sages of the ages.

Then we shall measure the distance traveled since graduation, and questions will arise. Have we followed the route of the wisest selection? Have we wasted time and energy on detours and dead-end by-roads? The questions will lead from reminiscence to rededication as new journeys begin. And that is the way of education.

President HAROLD W. TRIBBLE

The first task of the day for a busy President is opening the morning mail.

An outspoken delegate, Tribble backed many progressive proposals at the Baptist State Conventions.

A man of firm conviction, Dr. Tribble will always stand for the progress Wake Forest has made.

TRIBBLE'S RESIGNATION MARKS END OF ERA

An era has ended at Wake Forest. The man who has made headlines year after year, met controversy with conviction and challenges with determination will retire in June. Harold Wayland Tribble's decision to step down from the presidency of this College marked the end of an administration highlighted by dream-fulfilling progress, but torn by turbulent controversy.

Brought to the College in 1950 by the Trustees for the purpose of making the move to Winston-Salem, Tribble wasted no time in making the dream a reality. There were mixed feelings about the move and dissent mounted when construction costs soared from an estimated six million dollars to nineteen and one half million.

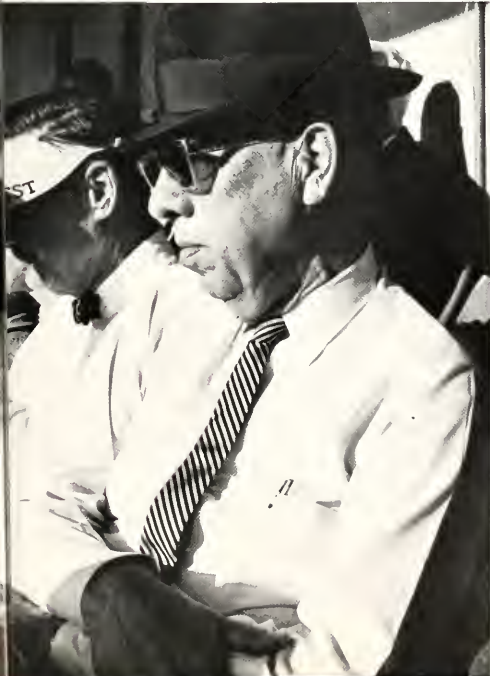

This marked the beginning of his opposition. He has fought with alumni, with Trustees and with the Baptist State Convention. The issues have varied from the athletic program to the 1957 decision to ban dancing on the campus. In more recent years the rift came when Baptists in two consecutive conventions voted down a proposal to modify the method for electing Trustees which would have been the first step in readying the college for university status.

Tribble has met each challenge with strong convictions and determination. He has not been afraid to say or do what he thought best and subsequently, he has known personal defeat. Abuse and controversy have not deterred him, however, and because of his convictions, university status for Wake Forest is now imminent. His sixteen years of dedication cannot be forgotten.

At a press conference October 14 Dr. Tribble announced his resignation to be effective in June.

An avid sports fan, Dr. Tribble supports the Deacons wherever they play.

Always ready to take a stand when the occasion demands, Dr. Tribble has addressed the Baptist State Convention repeatedly on the needs of a growing college.

WILSON TO RETURN TO TEACHING

"The classroom is still, for me at least, the very heart of the college . . ." With this strong belief, Dr. Edwin Wilson saw no alternative but to resign the position he has held for seven years as Dean of the College. Administrative tasks have limited his teaching to one course per semester and the demands on his time have been endless.

He has served well as a strong and capable administrator and his talent there will be missed. However, the spirit and enthusiasm he is able to generate in the classroom, the time he can spend with his classes, and the part of himself he can share with his students can now be broadened. The English Department and the student body are enriched by his decision.

Dean Wilson will return to full-time teaching here after serving as Dean of the College for seven years.

Always interested in the students, as Dean Dr. Wilson made time to listen to their ideas and to stimulate new thoughts.

Dean Wilson returns to the classroom to serve Wake Forest in another capacity.

Assistant Dean of the College, Robert Dyer

DEANS BEGIN SELF-STUDY PROGRAM

They continually work to see that the student is housed, academically capable, emotionally stable, applying to the best graduate schools, and seated comfortably in chapel. They are the deans and their responsibilities touch the life of each student here.

The Dean of Women, Lu Leake, in cooperation with the WGA, has been instrumental in liberalizing restrictions on coeds. Both Thomas Elmore, Dean of Students and an active member of the Education Department, and Robert Dyer, assistant Dean of the College, counsel and advise the student in many areas. Dean of Men Mark Reece serves as advisor to the College Union in addition to his job as counselor to four-fifths of Wake's student body.

In cooperation with the President's office the five deans are currently working on a self-study program of the college curriculum requirements and possible changes.

Theirs is the business of teaching. And inevitably, teaching is the business of talking: talking to an eight o'clock class convinced that the hour should be a time of sleep, and not of learning; talking to a lab session whose would-be scientists want to get on to looking through their microscopes, mixing up their chemicals, and writing their lab reports; talking to a seminar in which the students are always threatening to get ahead of the instructor. And teaching is a matter of reading: reading almost incoherent freshman themes; reading scholarly works in hopes of keeping up with ever-expanding research. Theirs is no easy business, but without it, the College would have no meaning and no purpose.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION

The Physical Education Department at Wake Forest is gaining strength in a variety of ways. Joining the six other professors on the staff of the department this fall were professors Keith Hamilton, Ron Morton, Glen Dawson, and Kenneth Karr. During the past summer, Leo Ellison represented the State Department in Egypt in the area of aquatics.

Among the activities offered to the approximately sixty junior and senior majors and other students interested in physical fitness are swimming, dancing, gymnastics, and numerous intramural sports. Expansion of the departmental curriculum is being planned, another step toward making the graduate department at Wake Forest a complete one.

ROTC

Fifty-one seniors in the Reserve Officer Training Corps received commissions as second lieutenants in the U.S. Army during commencement exercises in June. For the Military Science Department, their induction marked the end of a year which saw enrollment hit an all-time high. There were 150 freshmen and 126 sophomores enrolled in the Basic Course, and about 109 juniors and seniors enrolled in the Advanced Course.

Besides attending classes, ROTC cadets spend two periods in actual drill, which is conducted by the cadets themselves. Extensive training is also given in marksmanship and Civil Defense. Cadets in the Advanced Course must spend two weeks during the summer in basic training.

SOCIOLOGY AND ANTHROPOLOGY

The addition of graduate studies and several new courses highlighted the year's activities for the Sociology-Anthropology Department. Although at present there is only one graduate student enrolled in the dual department, plans are now being made for expansion of the graduate division. New undergraduate courses offered this year included Contemporary Latin American Cultures, General Anthropology, Bianthropology and Archaeology, Culture Change, and Social Organization and Problems.

Activity among department members was plentiful and varied. Dr. Banks was on leave to make an anthropological study of village life in Yugoslavia, while Dr. Tefft and two students worked in Cherokee over the summer. Dr. Patrick had one of his articles, "Capital Punishment," published as a chapter in a new sociology textbook, and another of his articles, "Desegregation in a Southern Town: A Descriptive Report," was reprinted in various languages. The department as a whole sponsored a lecture at the Piedmont University Center by Dr. Alvin Boskoff from Emory. From every point of view, then, this was an outstanding year for the Sociology-Anthropology Department.

ENGLISH

Freshmen enrolled for English 111 were the first participants in a revised program which featured a study of Utopian works, a switch from the usual course in essay writing. The second semester text was changed from one volume to a series of three paperbacks for a comprehensive study of poetry, short story, and drama. Dr. Thomas Fosso joined the faculty as a full professor. The chairman of the department, Dean Edwin Wilson, prompted a veritable celebration when he announced his return to his office as a full-time professor.

HISTORY

The History Department has one of the largest enrollments in any area of the humanities; eighteen faculty members teach over fifteen hundred students. Many articles were published by members of this department and two professors' current books were marketed. Dr. B. G. Gokhale's Asoka Maurya and Asian Studies I were published this year along with Dr. David Smiley's La solidarit  sudeste.

Frederick L. Bronner from Union College in New York was the visiting professor in history this year and Dr. Thomas Mullen was honored by being chosen for the National Cooperative Program in Humanities.

POLITICAL SCIENCE

The Political Science Department emphasizes the importance of current affairs through reflection upon total government systems, past and present. To meet this objective, the department is expanding and revising by adding to the curriculum this year a new course, "Survey of the Discipline," and by allowing juniors to take part in the honors program. Professors also are developing their abilities through research. Dr. Fleer is making a study of the state's politics from 1940 through the present, while Professors Broyles, Sears, and Reinhardt currently are working on their dissertations.

The Department of Romance Languages, which includes both the fields of French and Spanish, instituted for the first time this year an honors program. This, in addition to the Experiment in International Living and an active exchange program in which students of foreign language participate, provides majors with direct contact with other cultures. The department also co-sponsors the Institute of Literature which brings distinguished lecturers in many fields to this campus.

This department is comprised of fourteen faculty members and thirty majors.

LATIN AND GERMAN

Two Wake Forest students enrolled in German honors and were the first to receive credit for their labors. A departmental honors program had been established earlier, but the courses were offered without credit. A new precedent was established this year as an arrangement was made for visiting professors from Austria to teach within the department. Dr. Rheinhold Meyer was the first professor to participate in the program, which is coordinated by the House Committee on Health, Education, and Welfare.

Wake Forest's Classical Language Department is constantly growing, today constituting a larger percentage of the student body than ever before. As large as any Classical Language Department in North Carolina, the department's total enrollment is 426 students, six of whom are majors in the classics. Dr. Earp, department chairman, spoke before the district Latin Teachers Meeting this fall, and next year Wake Forest will sponsor the state meetings of high school Latin teachers and Greek and Latin college professors.

The Department of Religion was marked by achievement in 1967. Articles by Dr. Bryan and Dr. Via, a book by Dr. Angell, and a series of Methodist Sunday School lessons by Dr. Talbert were published. Dr. Griffin studied Oriental Religion and philosophy at the University of Hawaii, and Dr. Bryan taught at the Governor's School in Winston-Salem. The department sponsored a series of three Robinson lectures on the New Testament, archaeology, and the history of religions. In addition, a course in Biblical Hebrew was added to the curriculum. The department includes nine faculty members and one hundred twenty-five majors.

PHILOSOPHY

Although students in introductory philosophy were still subjected to the minds of men from Aristotle to Whitehead, in an effort to revamp the department, there was a condensation in the number of philosophers studied this year.

While these students read from paperbacks, advanced students used the Bernard W. Spilman Library, a collection of 4,000 volumes begun in 1934.

All members of the department, which includes Miss Gene Allred, a newcomer this year, are members of the American Philosophical Association. Dr. Virgilius Ferm, author of 25 volumes, and head of the department, has served as chairman of this organization.

MUSIC

The Music Department faculty, led by Dr. Thane McDonald, provides instruction in organ, piano, voice, and band and orchestra instruments. The band, under the direction of Dr. Calvin Huber, gives several concerts during the year and provides entertainment at football and basketball games.

The Wake Forest College Choir was founded in 1948 by its present director, Dr. McDonald. The choir has traveled from Vermont to Florida, singing for churches, schools, colleges, civic organizations, radio and television stations, hospitals, and service clubs. In addition, the choir presents several concerts annually.

SPEECH

Under the direction of Dr. Shirley, the Speech Department shows the student that effective communication is vital to public speaking, debate, theatre, television, radio, and everyday conversation. The department also provides extensive extracurricular activities. WFDD, under Dr. Burrough's guidance, the debate team, under the leadership of Dr. Shirley, president of the Southern Speech Association, and the College Theatre, under Dr. Tedford's direction, serve as channels for student interest. Highlights for the year included the theatre's four successful plays.

PSYCHOLOGY

The outstanding academic records of its majors and the numerous publications of its faculty members are indicative of the strength of the Psychology Department at Wake Forest. This department is comprised of eight professors and eighty majors. During the past year members of this department have had eighteen articles published.

The department sponsors a colloquium which is primarily attended by the fifteen graduate students although all students are invited. Professional psychologists from across the country address this group bi-monthly. An active honors program is also sponsored by the department.

BIOLOGY

Winston Hall overflowed this year with researchers equipped with finances from the National Science Foundation and students eagerly interested in project participation. Dr. Robert Higgins stepped beyond continental boundaries as he traveled to Pakistan and South America to study tardigrades and kinorhyncha. With the assistance of embryology students, Dr. J. W. Davis researched the effects of radiation on chicken embryos. Under grants from the N.S.F., Dr. Dale Hein studied the migratory mechanisms in ducks while his colleague Thomas Olive examined the speciation mechanisms in aphids. Dr. Robert Sullivan continued his work under the Department of Agriculture on mutants of horseflies as Dr. Walter Flory studied cytotoxonomy of the amaryllis family. Within the department are 160 majors from the junior and senior classes, with a substantial number of graduate students employed in intensive research.

PHYSICS

The Physics Department, this year, has taken the initiative in instigating a balance of teaching and research. The fact that four of its six members were invited to participate in a discussion of this problem before the December American Physics Meeting in Nashville, Tennessee, shows that they have been successful.

Several of the department members have gained recognition in areas other than their work at Wake Forest. Dr. Breheme worked during the past summer at M.I.T. on a study of using computers as physics tutors. This study proved that some computers actually make better tutors than people. Dr. Shields is on the program of an international meeting in Italy, where he will lead a session on irradiation effects in organic compounds.

The Chemistry Department's efforts to upgrade the undergraduate program were greatly enhanced this year by a special $11,000 grant for the improvement and addition of undergraduate laboratory equipment. Besides having access to the new equipment, the undergraduate can now attend the weekly department seminar and participate in summer research work sponsored by the National Science Foundation.

In addition, the Chemistry Department offers opportunities for work toward an M.A. degree and acts as host for the meetings of certain groups of the Central North Carolina Section of the American Chemical Society.

MATH

The experimental course was developed to aid in the transition from calculus problem-solving to theoretical studies. Under the title Introduction to Axiomatic Methods, the course was offered to juniors and seniors in an attempt to introduce the subject material of upper division courses. Prospective teachers at Wake Forest participated in a rigorous new training program under the auspices of the Education Department. The block system of practice teaching was instituted in order to assure maximum exposure to the classroom and teaching methods in a minimum time period. Approximately one hundred students signed up for the fifteen hour course which included a six-day, six-weeks period of methods, administration, and secondary education. After the completion of the training period, the students were assigned to classrooms in the city and taught every day from eight to four. The one remaining week in the semester was devoted to a concentrated re-evaluation of the student's work as methods were related to practical experience.

BUSINESS

The School of Business, through its Management Institute and affiliation with the Industrial Relations Center at the University of Chicago, has sponsored various programs and seminars this year offering to adults programs designed specifically for management development and self improvement. In the fall, night classes, taught by Wake Forest College faculty members or other qualified persons, were offered dealing with topics such as leadership, public speaking, and government finance. In the spring a Management Seminar was held with the purpose of broadening the participants' understanding of management functions and stimulating thinking in the area of individual effectiveness as an executive. The Seminar included discussions led by noted businessmen. Two new courses, macro and microeconomic theory, were introduced this year.

About 120 juniors and seniors are concentrating their studies in the School of Business and approximately 150 freshmen and sophomores are working toward degrees in business administration.

GRADUATE SCHOOL

The Division of Graduate Studies at Wake Forest is in the midst of a transition by which university status could be realized today, next week, or during the summer. Administrators say "within a year."

Today, though, it's a graduate studies program, and there are 196 students enrolled. One hundred forty-seven of these men and women are here on the main campus in the departments of biology, mathematics, sociology and anthropology, English, psychology, physics, and education. Next year there will be more students and they will be in the religion and physical education departments.

Climbing another step on the college-to-university ladder, the education department will begin this June the Master of Arts in education program. It has scheduled courses required for the insurance of the North Carolina Graduate Certificate since 1962.

Established in 1894, the Wake Forest Law School has steadily grown until it now has 193 students and eight faculty members. This year three institutes on "Continuing Legal Education" were conducted with the Law Schools of the University of North Carolina, Duke University, and the North Carolina Bar Association.

OMICRON DELTA KAPPA

To recognize men who have made achievements in campus activities and to inspire others to make similar attainments are the purposes of Omicron Delta Kappa, national honor and leadership fraternity.

Twice annually membership is awarded to outstanding junior, senior and graduate men on the basis of character, scholarship, and eminence in the college community. Although ODK's main contribution to the campus is the individual activities of its members, its main project, in cooperation with Tassels, is the direction of the annual spring leadership conference for outstanding state high school students.

TASSELS

Membership in Tassels, Wake's only honorary exclusively for women, is limited to junior and senior women. They are tapped biannually on the basis of scholastic standing, character, and outstanding leadership in areas of campus life including publications, student government, social and religious activities, and the arts. Honorary members of the organization are chosen from faculty and administration women who have made valuable contributions to the school. Tassels, which has traditionally been a local organization, is presently being considered for membership in Mortarboard, the national women's honorary society.

ALPHA EPSILON DELTA

The primary interest of Alpha Epsilon Delta, honorary pre-medical fraternity, is the presentation of programs of interest to scholars in the pre-medical sciences. This year members saw several films of topics from skin grafting to correction of an aneurysm. A program on pre-medical training was presented by Dr. Tnttle, director of admissions at Bowman Gray.

BETA BETA BETA

Beta Beta Beta, honorary biology fraternity, seeks to cultivate interest in the natural sciences and to promote a better appreciation of the values of biological study. In attaining these goals, Tri-Beta held bi-monthly meetings with guest speakers and sent delegates to the District Convention at the University of South Carolina and the National Convention in Washington, D. C.

GAMMA SIGMA EPSILON

Gamma Sigma Epsilon, national chemistry honorary, tried to reactivate itself this year and achieve its dual purpose of promoting fellowship among outstanding chemistry students and doing departmental service projects. At monthly meetings chemistry faculty members discussed their respective graduate schools. A departmental newsletter, the Crystal, was published and occasional social activities were sponsored by the group.

KAPPA MU EPSILON

The national fraternity for outstanding math students is Kappa Mu Epsilon. The vocationally-oriented organization has as its basis a three-fold purpose of promotion of interest in math on campus, creation of a closer fellowship among math scholars, and recognition of outstanding achievement in the field of mathematics. Besides several lectures and discussions held throughout the year, the club sponsored a Christmas banquet and a spring picnic.

PHI ALPHA THETA

The crest of Phi Alpha Theta, national honorary history fraternity, is a globe encircled by a tail-swallowing snake, which represents learning about the present from the past. The group held monthly meetings at which they discussed matters of current historical interest and the "how's and why's" of going to graduate school. This year their special project was the presentation of a paper at the mid-winter national convention in New York.

PHI EPSILON KAPPA

The Alpha Lambda chapter of the national physical education honorary, Phi Epsilon Kappa, met twice a month this year. Its projects included administering the motor ability tests during orientation, sponsoring the Black and Blue faculty-PEK basketball game, officiating at track events, and publishing the Black and Gold Bulletin.

DELTA PHI ALPHA

The goal of the Delta Phi Alpha honorary German fraternity is the enhancement of the study of German—as a language, as a literary tool, and as a medium of culture. At monthly meetings, professors of German, history and political science spoke on the literature and politics of Germany.

ETA SIGMA PHI

To recognize outstanding scholarship in Greek and Latin, students are inducted into Eta Sigma Phi, the national classical language fraternity. Throughout the year national and international scholars presented lectures on the campus. In the spring the fraternity held its annual initiation ceremony which was conducted in Latin.

PHI SIGMA IOTA

A small French dictionary around a student's neck this year was an indication that he was being initiated into Phi Sigma Iota, national language fraternity. At monthly supper meetings, the members presented programs on French or Spanish literature to achieve their purpose of getting to know the people, thought, culture and literature of both countries.

SCABBARD AND BLADE

To be elected to the honorary military fraternity of Scabbard and Blade, an advanced ROTC cadet must show leadership ability and overall excellence in the ROTC program. This year the group participated in a ROTC orientation and promotion program in local high schools and took charge of the blood drive on campus.

PERSHING RIFLES

Any ROTC cadet may apply and go through a training period to become a member of the Pershing Rifles military science fraternity. Pledges armed with white wooden rifles guard the women's dorms in the fall. The purpose of the organization is to foster a spirit of friendship and cooperation among men in the military and to promote a highly efficient drill company. In trying to achieve this goal, the group held four bivouacs and participated in drill meets and parades.

HOWLER '67 IS LARGEST EDITION YET

Between filling fifty square feet of new bulletin board space and traveling to the snack shop, an attempt was made to publish a distinctive and colorful history of 1966-67 at Wake Forest. Many innovations and firsts were incorporated into this year's HOWLER. For the first time in the sixty-five year history of the book, full color was used extensively throughout the introduction. The type of printing was changed from letterpress to offset allowing greater choice of picture material and more freedom in design and layout.

Appropriately, the largest staff in HOWLER history compiled and edited the largest edition yet. Thirty-six pages were added allowing more extensive coverage of all phases of campus life. Major changes were made in academic coverage as individual pictures of faculty members replaced the formal group pictures of past years. A mosaic style of layout was used exclusively throughout the introductory section of the book giving those pages a more informal appearance than in the past.

OLD GOLD CREATES TYPICAL CONTROVERSY

Assistant Editor, Ralph Simpson, and Managing Editor, Henry Bostic.

The Old Gold and Black, as proud of its fighting tradition as ever, continued to bear the colors of conflict as it hammered at such strongholds as student government, the administration, and Woman's Government Association. New frontal attacks this year included the Honor System and Who's Who. A relatively quiet first semester recorded headlines such as Tribble's resignation, quickly followed by that of the Dean of the College. Top stories consistently broke on Friday immediately before the news deadline, plunging the staff into the panic appropriate for a newspaper office.

The editor ordered a rehabilitation week before exams in order for the staff to complete 19 term papers. After registration, the office crew gathered a second wind and plunged into a grabbag of new stories determined to find controversy in the conventional.

The old news in the paper took on a new look as the printing process became more complicated. Letterpress type and offset picture reproduction were combined to offer clearer pictures, up-to-date sports stories, and reading that was easier on the eyes.

"THE STUDENT" RECEIVES ITS FIRST ALL-AMERICAN

After beginning the year by announcing The Student's first All-American Award, Editor Richard Fallis made several major changes in the format of the campus general interest magazine. Five new departments were added to the publication: movies, books, travel, records, and "soap box," a provocative invitation to students to voice their opinions. In an attempt to better appeal to a divergent student body, each issue of The Student was developed around a central theme. Five installments were distributed this year, the first of which centered around the Winston-Salem community. Succeeding issues focused on such topics as student protest and the educational rat race on college campuses. Interviews with campus personalities, picture stories, and other feature articles emphasized each issue's theme and accompanied the standard collection of prose and poetry. The Student publications were critical but constructive commentaries on campus attitudes and life.

WFDD EXPANDS IN PROGRAM AND RANGE

WFDD, "the voice of Wake Forest," has undergone several changes this year under the leadership of the station manager, Ken Johnson. With a voltage increase from 10 to 36,000 watts, the radio station has been able to expand its range to include an eighty-mile radius. Several local firms and an expressly formed group raised funds to purchase the equipment that is responsible for the expanded range and new year-round broadcasting, portions of which are in stereo. Found at 650 on the AM dial and 88.1 on the FM dial, the station is currently broadcasting for ten hours each weekday. The "Deaconlite Serenade" still remains the most popular show scheduled by the station. It is aired weeknights from ten o'clock until midnight. Variety is the key in the other programs offered by WFDD which range from classical and popular music, to news, lectures, and other specials.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT PUSHES CHANGE AND REORGANIZATION

Action and innovations were the aims and accomplishments of the Student Government in 1966-67. Although initially plagued by personnel turnovers, the political machinery functioned with a new-found efficiency, and gained an unprecedented amount of prestige with students and administration. Under President Butch Pate, SG created a new committee which coordinated the scheduling of campus social functions, and instituted regular meetings with Dr. Tribble to discuss campus problems. In addition, Student Government finally achieved its goal of having professors names listed in class schedule booklets, sponsored the annual all-campus Christmas party for local orphans, and the banquet for Piedmont area business leaders. Most importantly, SG assumed the direction of Challenge '67, which had been instituted in 1965, and pledged to be responsible for future Fall Carnivals, a new Wake tradition started this year by the Junior Class.

Butch Pate outlines Student Government activities for the year at an Orientation Assembly.

Remodeled offices and legislative assembly room were the external gloss for a student government which seemed to have acquired a new-found direction and movement. SG supported the drive for more student enthusiasm with bus caravans to games, pep rallies and a thundering victory cannon. In an effort to better finance worthy projects, the legislature subsidized the Fall Carnival and Senior Week. The executive branch began a re-evaluation of the present Student Body Constitution which is to result in a proposal for major revision of the SG structure within the next year.

In its most important long range project, the Student Government began planning for a new College Union Building in a joint project with the CU. The committee continues its work and hopes to obtain final approval for the building in the near future.

MEN'S JUDICIAL BOARD PASSES THIRD YEAR OF CONTROVERSY

In its third year as the campus' only joint committee on which students and faculty members have equal votes, the Men's Judicial Board continued to be a center of controversy. Under perennial attack by student leaders and the campus newspaper, the board, which tries cases involving conduct charges against male students, continued to operate under an informal outline of procedure instead of written statutes.

The board is composed of six faculty members chosen by the college, and five elected students from the three upper classes. Its sixth student member is elected by the preceding board. The board this year attempted to make students more familiar with its functions through participation in a fall chapel program.

COUNCIL INTERPRETS HONOR SYSTEM FOR STUDENTS

This year's Honor Council initiated a theme focused on recognition of the individual student's role. In accordance, the Council wrote a special pamphlet about the Wake Forest Honor system to distribute to the students. To broaden the outlook of the system, a supper forum, which is to become a yearly session, was held for the first time with Honor Councils from the University of Virginia, Davidson and Salem. At the University of Virginia, the Council participated in the third annual conference of Honor Councils from Southeastern colleges and universities.

WGA REORGANIZES PROCEDURE, STRESSES BETTER COMMUNICATION

Bigger responsibility and better representation was the theme of the year for the Women's Government Association. Giving more prestige to the position of hall counselor, a new system was adopted under which hall counselors took over the closing of the dorms and underwent a spring orientation period to familiarize them with their new jobs. Further, counselors took turns attending meetings of the Executive Council in order to have better communications between the girls and the Council. A variety of activities was offered this year through the joint efforts of the FWAC and Functions Committees. These activities included the traditional big sister-little sister picnic, a bridge tournament, an auction, and four career seminars. On the whole, the system made progress and organizational changes which will be effective for several years.

CU-SPONSORED EVENTS ACTIVATE CAMPUS LIFE

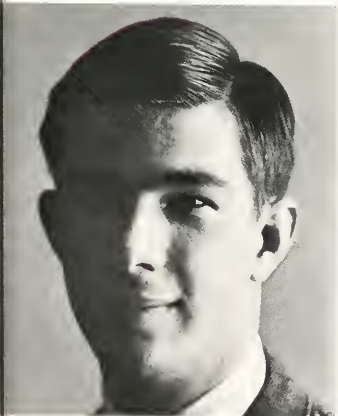

With a larger budget than ever before, the College Union played an important role in the life of Wake Forest students. The increase of the student activity fee to ten dollars a year provided the C.U. with a budget of $32,000, which was used in sponsoring combo parties, the Homecoming and Christmas dances, the New York theatre trip, and several successful concerts. Among the artists featured were the Bitter End Singers, Anthony and the Imperials, the Dukes of Dixieland, Ferrante and Teicher, and the Four Seasons. The art exhibits in Humanities, the lecture series, and the twice weekly movie all brought a sampling of culture to Wake Students.

CHRISTMAS SEASON HIGHLIGHTS THE YEAR FOR COLLEGE VOCAL GROUPS

Early in September the eighty-six selected members of the chapel choir began their preparations for a busy year. In addition to frequent appearances in chapel, the group prepared Benjamin Britten's "A Ceremony of Carols" for Christmas, Mary Caldwell's "Of Time and Eternity" for the Magnolia Festival, and were a part of the all-city mixed choir for Dr. Billy Graham's service in November. Selected from the main chapel choir are members of the touring choir, the Singing Deacs, a male quartet, and a new female trio, the Deacon Belles. The Madrigals are a student sponsored group who perform fifteenth and sixteenth century music at special campus concerts and on tour.

BAND BOOSTS WAKE'S SPIRIT AT RALLIES, GAMES, AND CONCERTS

The enthusiasm of the students and the arranging and directing talents of Dr. Calvin Huber made this year a highly successful one for our bands. Boosting spirit at pep rallies and football games, the Marching Deacons and smaller groups such as the Pep Band and Stage Band provided extra enjoyment for the student body. The combined Concert and Varsity Bands made a record, "Songs of Wake Forest." With the Concert Band's successful spring tour of eight high schools, the year was brought to a close.

ORCHESIS AND MARITIMERS

Two extra-curricular organizations, the Orchesis Club and Maritimers, provided Wake coeds with a welcome break from studies as well as an opportunity to increase skill in modern dance and synchronized swimming. This year's presentation by the Orchesis Dance Club was "Under the Big Top." By coordinating her own routine, each girl gained a greater understanding of interpretive dance. The maritimers scheduled two shows this year, a water adaptation of "The Night Before Christmas" and a spring program with a surprise theme.

Through competition in speech, the Wake Forest debate team offers an opportunity to broaden knowledge in a particular area and to learn logical organization of thoughts and expression. The topic for debate this year was "Resolved: That the United States should substantially reduce its foreign policy commitments." Besides sponsoring three debate tournaments on campus, the team also traveled to compete at such schools as Dartmouth, Duke, Emory, and the U.S. Naval Academy.

COLLEGE THEATER

"Variety is the spice of life" was the aim of this year's College Theater productions, and the directors adequately achieved their goal through stage designing and varied types of plays.

The first play of the season, Moliere's comic masterpiece, "The Misanthrope," used costumes of "hante couture" and "op" art stage designs. The set for Henrik Ibsen's "A Doll's House" was a three-sided interior of a room with the audience observing the action through the open side. To further diversify this year's selections, the "Caucasian Chalk Circle" emphasized the "alienation effect" of its author, Bertolt Brecht, and mocked Communism.

BSU WORKS THROUGH IMPROVED COMMITTEE STRUCTURE

Baptists and non-Baptist students joined together to form the nine committees which worked to make the Baptist Student Union a well-organized and active group. Supper forums, held in Tanglewood park and the BSU Center, brought many students together for recreation and informative lectures and discussions on such pertinent subjects as "What is Honor?" and "Why a University?". Every week night, vesper services were held in Davis Chapel with filmstrips, organ music, discussions, or guest speakers. Members of the BSU also had the opportunity of working with social problems of the underprivileged through the Patterson Avenue Home Project. Highlighting the activities of the organization this year, the State Activities Committee welcomed students from other colleges to the BSU Convention held here. Approximately five hundred students attended the November meeting, the theme of which was "Faith in Learning."

The loosely organized Interdenominational Center promotes campus religious and intellectual interests through its varied programs and facilities. ## A YEAR OF CONTINUED SERVICE FOR APO 1967 was a busy year for Alpha Phi Omega which, as always, emphasized service projects. Beginning early, the APO's served incoming Deacons as Orientation guides and gathered information to print their campus student directory. In the interest of helping student budgets, they continued their book exchange and intra-campus mail service. The APO Ugly Man contestants amused crowds at the Fall Carnival while collecting monetary votes for charity causes. A new fraternity project for this year was the errand service for infirmary patients.

ALPHA KAPPA PSI PREPARES FUTURE BUSINESS LEADERS

The Gamma Delta chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi, America's oldest and largest professional business fraternity, was organized at Wake Forest College to further develop interest in the business world. The club selects its new members each year from business and economics majors on the basis of their academic performance and professional interest in business. To further develop members' interest in the business world field trips and seminars were sponsored to observe commercial areas from marketing and production to personnel and finance. In order to help establish valuable business contacts for its members the fraternity sponsored talks by speakers from the Winston-Salem areas such as Mr. John Rainey, Public Relations Director for the Winston-Salem Chamber of Commerce and Col. John Reed, director of the Wake Forest Placement office.

NEW TRADITIONS ACCOMPANY DELTA SIGMA PI TO NEW HOUSE

Furthering the academic success of the School of Business Administration and its students is the goal of the Delta Sigma Pi business fraternity. Lectures sponsored this year featured Dr. A. J. Dietz of Emory University, M. Henry Garrity, head of the alumni activities at Wake Forest, and two staff officers from the U. S. Government Accounting office. Social activities varied from frequent combo parties to the annual Rose and Founder's Day Dances. Not just a business club, the fraternity is striving to achieve recognition and success as an integral part in the academic and social life of Wake Forest College.

TWENTY-FIVE EXCHANGE STUDENTS STIMULATE WAKE'S INTERNATIONAL INTEREST

Foreign exchange students are vital to a college, as they provide unlimited opportunities for cultural exchange. Wake Forest's interest in such an exchange was reflected in the fact that twenty-five foreign students studied here this year. The students came to the campus through such organizations as the African and Latin American Scholarship Programs in American Universities and the International Institute of Education. The College also has exchange programs with the Free University of West Berlin and the University of the Andes.

Wake Forest sponsors an International Club, which tries to promote understanding and fellowship between American and foreign students through informal discussions and lectures on subjects of international concern. With a dramatic increase in students and support, Wake Forest has indicated its willingness to play a major role in the world today.

VIETNAM BUILD-UP INFLUENCES ROTC PROGRAM

Increased U. S. support of the war in Vietnam and a general renewal of interest in the military services brought 379 men into the ranks of the Reserve Officers Training Corps at Wake Forest this year. At a time when a college man's draft status shares equal importance with his quality point ratio, making a man an officer in four years' time requires a lot of concentrated work. The first two years the cadet learns to be a member of a unit. In the advanced program his attention is focused on a wide range of subjects such as military teaching and administration, large unit tactics, and the U. S. role in world affairs. When he receives his commission in June, the 2nd Lieutenant is fully prepared to assume a position of leadership in the U. S. Army.

They come here to complete the metamorphosis into adults by way of the learning process of college life. They spend the first portion of each day within a classroom, following lecture notes or filling blue books with perhaps recently accumulated knowledge.

They spend much of their out-of-class hours poring over written pages, in preparation for coming classes. They will leave this campus as more intelligent persons, more aware of the world of knowledge. But a college campus offers them more than just an awareness of someone else's recorded and published discoveries. They are also offered development of social awareness, an ability to communicate with the world about them. Fraternities, societies, the Men's Residence Council, and other social organizations sponsor a program which encourages them to find a balance between the social and academic worlds.

MEN'S RESIDENCE COUNCIL

This year for the first time an effective residence house system was instigated at Wake Forest. Although still in developmental stages, the Men's Residence Council has assumed general responsibility for the implementation of house programs.

The traditional fall social attraction, the MRC Red Garter Dance, was held in November in the Hotel Robert E. Lee. Featuring for the first time a duel attraction, the Red Garter presented the Daydreams and the Impacts combo in the ballroom, while Dick Wells and his orchestra played soft-shoe style in the hotel Skyroom.

While the main concentration this year has been on renovating and furnishing newly acquired lounge facilities to fulfill current social needs, the Men's Residence Council is also making progress toward fulfillment of extra-classroom academic needs and vitally needed leadership training.

This year MRC members had many opportunities to have dates over and dance in the quads.

The unity of men's dorms under the MRC enabled students to have more and better combo parties throughout the year.

When the lounge plans were in beginning stages, Taylor men had to meet in the narrow tunnels to decide how they could remodel them.

Removing metal trunk storage racks from the walls was only one task in making the Taylor lounge out of a tunnel and storage room.

Taylor's ambition and determination at the first of the year proved successful with the resulting lounge and unified house.

TAYLOR HOUSE

Taylor House can be described rightfully as the rags-to-riches organization. It began the year with no organization and of course no lounge space. Who can forget the mixer with an entire dorm of women? Then came the rapid rise of the monks and their accompanying council. "Who wants to buy 200 caps—red in variety?" The building of the wine cellar demonstrated the dedication and overall philosophy of Taylor House. They did it all themselves. Taylor House connotes many images: individualism, belonging, work, play, responsibility and pride. It is a house of crises, a house built because of common needs and goals. But perhaps most of all they are truly a HOUSE, a working concept of collective individualism.

DAVIS HOUSE

This year Davis House developed into a dynamic organization with a redecorated lounge, which proved to be a "place to get away from it all," an improved social calendar, and an active intramural sports program.

The lounge was redone during the summer and became a shelter where Housemen could read, converse, watch the "boob tube," play bridge, or hold informal gatherings.

Socially, Davis House had a Wake Forest first—an art party, where Housemen and their dates were provided paints, brushes, and easels and were allowed to portray their creative talent. Some of these masterpieces are presently hanging in the house's "Lion's Den."

Like most young organizations, the problems were many. But Davis men learned that with a little enthusiasm and an abundance of hard work these problems could be solved. Many of them which seemed insurmountable were overcome with the help and guidance of housemaster, Dr. Judson Allen. Davis looks back upon a gratifying year.

The first warm rays of spring bring Davis sun-worshippers to the balconies.

In the wee hours of the morning after the dorm noise has quieted down, Charles Boss finds his room a good place to study.

KITCHIN HOUSE

During its first full year of operation, Kitchin House made major accomplishments in the areas of social and athletic events, academics, and school spirit. Socially, Kitchin held several Quad-dances and sponsored the first mixer between students of Wake Forest and UNC-C. To help improve relations between students and faculty, the House sponsored its second annual Faculty Dinner-Auction in the spring. Also, Kitchin maintained an extensive intramural program which boasted several first-place teams. Academically, Kitchin House offered its members the largest independent test file on campus and provided housemen with a tutorial program. Kitchin also instigated the practice of giving its freshmen residents prior knowledge of their roommates. To show its school spirit, Kitchin sold bumper stickers, with half of the proceeds going to the Stadium Drive, sold pep buttons for the football games, and painted pep banners. Also, Kitchin's candidate in APO's Ugly Man Contest became the first independent ever to win that coveted title.

A major project for Kitchin House during football season was the selling of pep buttons before and after chapel to boost school spirit.

POTEAT HOUSE

In its first full year of operation, Poteat House had many outstanding accomplishments to its credit. Striving to create a unique and balanced program, the men of Poteat have concentrated on three main areas of college life—academic, athletic, and social.

An academic honorary was established for those men exhibiting excellence in study. A study hall was made available nightly with coffee being available for all. Also a unique free tutoring program was offered to housemen.

Poteat continually set the pace on the athletic scene, winning championships in football, wrestling, swimming, golf, and bowling. Each of Poteat's teams was outfitted in new uniforms.

The newly furnished lounge was the scene of numerous combo parties and after-the-game get-togethers. In the spring an awards banquet was held at a local country club in which individuals were recognized for their contributions to the house. Poteat's annual Art Show and sale met again with tremendous success, drawing praise from faculty, students, and local residents.

WOMEN'S DORMS

Babcock, Bostwick, and Johnson are no man's land. These are the girls' dorms, and to the co-ed they become the base of operations, a second home. It is here that the co-ed learns the principles of group living. She indulges in gossip sessions, spends time on the telephone, and takes care of her domestic chores in an environment that reflects the differences of the characters of the girls themselves. The sign-out card becomes her pass to the outside world. Whether the co-ed is slipping to Vegas, the vending machine center which replaces a family refrigerator, or preparing for a class, she is growing and maturing. As she learns to live with many different people, she is learning to realize the importance of understanding others and of better understanding herself.

House mothers in Johnson Dormitory—Mrs. Turner and Mrs. Holden.

House mothers in Babcock Dormitory—Mrs. Eames and Mrs. Madry.

House presidents—Marcia Black, Diane Baldwin, Debbie Snapp, Emily Steifle, Bonnie Walthall, and Jade Norris.

House mothers in Bostwick Dormitory—Mrs. Overby and Miss Dana Hanna.

An athletic victory demands the Wake Forest tradition of "rolling the dorms."

Julian Rainwater finds the desk and public address system his communication with his date.

DAY STUDENTS AND MARRIED STUDENTS

Ann Corle, wife of a Wake law student, is closely connected with the college as secretary in the dean's office.

When Bill Davis, first year law student, takes study breaks, he and his wife enjoy playing with their daughter Suzanne.

Sixty-five feet of aluminum mobility serve as temporary homes for half of Wake's married students.

MARRIED STUDENTS LEAD DIFFICULT BUT REWARDING LIFE

Married students constitute a unique part of the Wake Forest community. There are never-ending demands placed on them since, in addition to school work, they must find time to keep house, to be with the children (if any), and to be a good husband or wife. Moreover, financial difficulties sometimes require that one or both of the students handle an outside job.

Despite the inconveniences and pressure, many of Wake's married students have been able to gain rewards unknown to dormitory students. Among these is that unique appreciation for learning which can be attained only when one has to struggle for his education. But, above all, the married student's compensation comes from the security and warmth of close family living.

At Christmas married students find time to put away house work and studies to prepare for a busy holiday season.

One cannot study all the time, and these day students find their lounge a comfortable place to play cards.

DAY STUDENTS STRIVE TO BELONG TO THE COLLEGE WORLD

For several hundred Wake Forest students Room 7, Reynolda Hall, is a home away from home, for this is the room reserved for the use of day students. During their leisure time, or between classes, many of them gather here to socialize, to take time for a bridge game, to study, or to take a nap. But by no means are their activities restricted to this lounge. Day students participate actively in campus organizations, attend social functions, and often assume positions of campus leadership. Also, they have the opportunities to make lasting friendships with resident students, both inside and outside of the classroom. Thus, even though they are on campus only a few hours each day, day students are full-time members of the Wake Forest "family."

For law student Joe Maddrey, his off-campus home furnishes a quiet and roomy place to study.

Off-campus living has its problems as well as its pleasures. It does not take these boys long to appreciate home cooking.

After a day on campus, the day student goes home to prepare for the next day's classes.

For day students who have free hours between classes, the day student lounge is a popular spot to kick one's shoes off and study.

GREEKS

First semester open houses give the Sigma Chis a chance to rush freshman Mike Mulkey before second semester.

IFC

Working in its second year of deferred rush, the Inter-Fraternity Council has effectively continued its annual activities while also increasing its responsibilities. Each year the IFC includes in its activities Mid-Winters weekend in the Fall and Greek Week in the Spring. In addition to these events, the IFC this year has provided for the creation of a Junior IFC so that the pledges composing it can offer their ideas on deferred rush. Other efforts of the IFC have resulted in a liberalization of the open house rules for fraternities, and plans are being made to help solve the problems involved with college chaperone requirements.

Composed of three representatives from each fraternity, the IFC serves as the governing body for the fraternity system, while also providing a needed link between the system and the faculty and administration. Both socially and administratively the Inter-Fraternity Council is a vital part of campus life.

The ISC tea held early in the fall acquainted the freshman co-eds with the society officers and general society information.

ISC

The Inter-Society Council has spent a large part of its 1966-67 year re-evaluating the entire society system at Wake Forest. The evaluation, headed by the Student Affairs Committee of the faculty, was centered both in the individual clubs and in the council as a whole. Attempts were made at self-evaluation in each society, and the council sought to define the role of social clubs for women on this campus.

This year has been an unusually busy one for the ISC. Several new practices have been introduced, such as a tea in the early fall to welcome freshman women and a column in the Old Gold and Black highlighting weekly society activities.

Other accomplishments of the ISC were the revision of the present constitution and the establishment of a cabinet and committee system to facilitate the functioning of the group.

Greeks started the Christmas season with annual Midwinters activities featuring the Tams, the Zodiacs, and Rufus Thomas.

Johnnie Jackson gets this dog in good shape before it finds a new home at the Lambda Chi Dog Day.

The Fideles and Kappa Sigs were only two of the Greek groups that played Santa to Winston-Salem children.

After the regular events of Derby Day are over, the real chase begins with shaving cream down to the mud hole.

The co-eds look forward to fraternity serenades almost as much as this Sigma Chi group enjoys serenading its pinmates.

In fraternity track events, all the boys ran hard leaving the spectators wondering who would finally win.

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

Alpha Sigs switched their redecorating efforts this year from their well-marked exterior to an extensive repaneling job on the inside.

1966-67 proved to be a good year for the Beta Mu Chapter of Alpha Sigma Phi. Numerous activities highlighted the fall semester, including the usual combo parties, homecoming weekend, and the annual North-South football game, which the South won by a lopsided 30 to 14 margin. Walnut paneling was added to a major portion of the house, thereby giving it an impressive "new look" for both brothers and alumni. Exams climaxed the fall semester with the Sigs studying hard to achieve academic success.

Spring semester set the scene for rush parties, spring holidays, Greek Week activities, and another fun-filled beach weekend at Myrtle Beach. June ushered in graduation and brought an end to another successful year of college and community service for the brothers of Alpha Sigma Phi, who are anticipating another great year in 1967-68 at Wake Forest University.

Let's hear it for another Alpha Sig football victory.

Occasionally the Alpha Sigs need to clean the area around the rock that marks the entrance to their house.

The Alpha Sigs' proximity to Slater's Dempster Dumpster offers a convenient point of celebration for newly pinned brothers.

DELTA SIGMA PHI

The year 1966-1967 was a successful one for Delta Sigma Phi in all respects.

The fraternity was very proud of Brothers Andy Harper and Ken Hauswald, both of whom were named to Who's Who in American Colleges. Harper was additionally honored by being named to the All ACC Football Team.

This year Delta Sig adopted a Navaho Indian child in New Mexico. The fraternity pays for his education and helps him financially in other areas.

In the social sphere, the brotherhood had a typically outstanding year. Aside from the numerous parties throughout the year, the fraternity held its annual formal Playboy Party and celebrated the Sailor's Ball at Myrtle Beach in May.

KAPPA ALPHA

Tau Chapter of Kappa Alpha Order is pledged to maintaining the high ideals of character which were best exemplified by Robert E. Lee. The application of the high standards set by Lee, the fraternity's spiritual founding is uppermost in the collegiate life of each brother.

K.A. has constantly stressed the importance of scholastic achievement. Tau Chapter has never fallen below third place among the ten participating fraternities and has dominated first place for ten of the last fourteen years.

A year of outstanding accomplishment in the intramural program found K.A.'s first in 1966. Complementing the scholastic and athletic phases, the social year included such activities as the Orphan's Christmas Party, the Rose Ball, the Convivium, and the reign of Miss Hannah Nicholson as Kappa Alpha Rose.

KAPPA SIGMA

After the frightful scare of almost being placed on social probation because of academic reasons, the home of the Star and Crescent recovered quickly and by Homecoming was back in full form. If week days were given over to academic endeavors more so than in the past, weekends were as fun-packed as ever—from Midwinters, Commode Ball, Star and Crescent, to beach weekend in May. And as usual Kappa Sigma was active in all extracurricular activities.

What "Siggie" will ever forget (even if they would like to) the "late" times at Hillcrest, those nights at the Sheraton, getting "loafed" by Stokes or Bosh, seeing "Triple Threat" wobble in from the Tavern or hobble around on crutches, getting hit by a water bomb, the tremendous performance by "Mouse" and the Riverias at the rush party, "Useless's" date at Meredith, the great pledge classes, the night "Troll's" car was wrecked by a Pika, the "closeness" of the beach weekend, or Star and Crescent. All these and many, many more combined to make '66-'67 a great one for Kappa Sigma at Wake.

The Kappa Sig car was a smashing success at the Junior Class Carnival for all who wanted to show their strength.

Ed Ferguson begins Kappa Sig's year-long money making projects by selling sun visors at the football games.

Brothers waited until the pre-dawn hours of homecoming to erect house decorations.

The Kappa Sigs spend halftime planning plays to give them a victory against a rival fraternity.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

During '66-'67, every week was "the week that was" in the Halls of Lambda Chi. The returning brothers were welcomed by new furnishings in the chapter room and five new inches on Robby's beltline. On campus throughout the year, Lambda Chi was represented through its members in Student Government, Honor Council, and Men's Judicial Board . . . there was also liberal representation down at the girls' dorms. Before Christmas, the Lambda Chi's treated Winston-Salem to its fourth annual Dog Day, when 47 puppies found new homes. Then there was the party with the little children from the Orphans' Home. Some other things that won't be forgotten: Finn and his Air Force . . . G.O. on the phone to Salem . . . the W.W.B. of White Rose Ball . . . the Action Faction . . . and spring at Myrtle Beach. Yes, it was a very good year for the wearers of the Cross and Crescent.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

This has been another outstanding year for "the House that Brotherhood Built," from the first road trip to Virginia to our fantastic Dreamgirl beach weekend. As always, we were at the top in scholastic achievement and in athletics, and insured our future standing by pledging an impressive group of rushees. Of course, there were those parties—and how could anyone ever forget them.

Memories are made of this—the "Hard Core"; redeyes on the second floor; countless road trips; all those married brothers; our Greek foster son, Gavriil Vasiliadis; ski trips (and some people not making it up the slopes); the TV team; three to go from the Chalet; the way the house looked after open houses; our jukebox—the first on campus; studying sometimes; getting up for big weekends and then not making the weekend.

It all shows that the unusual is the usual at the PiKA house.

SIGMA CHI

Since its establishment at Wake Forest, Sigma Chi has been a leader in all phases of campus life. As leaders of campus organizations, Sigma Chis were well represented this year. Three brothers, including Chairman Bob Sumner, served on the Honor Council; several brothers, including Chip Cooper, were active as Student Government and class officers; and Jerry Baker headed Challenge '67, one of the most rewarding events of the year. In athletics, ten Sigma Chis were on the varsity athletic squads. Academically, the Sigma Chis stressed scholarship, with eleven brothers making the Dean's List fall semester. Socially, 1966-67 was a successful year, with such bands as the In-men, Monzas, Embers, and the Fabulous Five, providing entertainment for combo parties. Derby Day highlighted the social calendar for spring semester. Another outstanding Sweetheart Ball at the Tryon Seville at O.D. climaxed the social activities for the year.

SIGMA PI

The 1966-67 school year saw the Alpha Nu Chapter of Sigma Pi assume an ever widening role in campus life. The brothers hit the books hard during the fall semester in an attempt to remain the number one fraternity academically, an honor they captured the previous spring. Another strong intramural football team was fielded by the Pi's, and parties, as usual, provided what seemed to be full-time entertainment. Particularly to be remembered are the UNICEF Halloween Party with the Strings and the typically great Homecoming Party at Graylyn.

Spring came and the Pi's selected a new and vigorous slate of officers. February was highlighted by a successful Rush Program and the annual Founder's Day Banquet. March brought more pinnings, more unscheduled midnight swims, and more serenades. In April, the Pi's turned their attention to the Orchid Ball Weekend with its Award Banquet and Formal Dance. May brought the annual Orphan's Picnic, a long-awaited beach trip, and finals. Throughout the year, Sigma Pi showed itself to be truly a Brotherhood.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON

Starting fresh from a successful fall rush, the Brothers of N. C. Zeta Chapter of Sigma Phi Epsilon and their eleven pledges began their quest for social enjoyment and academic excellence, and usually found success in both fields. Sparked by Phil "THE GOOSE" McGee, who brought the world marathon shower record to Wake Forest while attempting to raise funds for the stadium, the house erupted with new feats of daring and deeds of accomplishment. Whether it was the weekend flights of "Vulture" and "Nunzie," the escapades of Demon Deacon Dwight Gentry, or a Christmas Party for orphans, something was happening all year.

It was a very good year for receiving trophies, as the "House with a Heart" was presented the all-fraternity trophy for having the highest percentage of blood donors. Also, a Sig Ep was named the Most Outstanding Deacon Football Player for the 1966 season.

THETA CHI

Theta Chi has long been composed of men who strive for the best in an organization without giving up their individuality. This was another memorable year for the Big Red in all areas. They continued their domination of intramural football and won six other championships for an all-time high intramural record for a single semester. Brothers were again active in all other phases of school life. Theta Chi took first place in Homecoming decorations and celebrated at a banquet with alumni after the game. Their formal weekend saw a Playmate, two dances, alumni, a banquet, and a great time for all. The social scene was highlighted with the annual Dream Girl weekend held at Myrtle Beach. The fraternity and brothers took honors and were active throughout 1966-1967. It was another good year for the men of Theta Chi.

CAMEO

They began, "Society sisterhood: that is our aim, bonded with pride in the Cameo name." Now they are a year old and have a legion of happy memories under that Cameo name. Proud they are indeed to be this society's charter members. Their parties, sports events, Derby Day scrambling, rushing, service projects—to all of them every girl has given a part of herself as an individual to make these undertakings successful and worthwhile. To the Cameo sisters to mention such things as pink outfits, Cornell Kappa Sigma pins, a multicolored carnival booth, a sweetheart named Bill Rucker, a song called "Today," and a girls' basketball team brings back a flood of joyous memories of this year. Through their activities together, lasting friendships have arisen. Now it can be said with confidence, "Cameo sisters forever will be bonded together in true Cameo loyalty."

The Cameos were fortunate to have many get-togethers and dinner meetings at Marty Andrus' home in Winston.

"Homecooking" was never better than what Cameos concocted for innumerable picnics.

Boosting Deacon spirit through massive signs is the goal of every society during football season.

FIDELES

Janie Wade gathers supplies to complete the Fidele Follies booth, the most profitable Carnival entry.

From the missing Sigma Chi car and a serenade ending with a mouthful of shaving cream to a red and white Christmas for kids at the Kappa Sig and Sigma Chi houses, friendship, fellowship and fun brought success upon success to Fideles in '67. A dream come true for two little boys in basketball camp as a result of Saturday afternoon car washes, defeat of the Sig Ep football team and their subsequent retreat to the Chalet (. . . the name of the game is . . .), the apple hobbing (polishing) for faculty kids, the fall serenade for W.F. men—all were great. Exchanging gag gifts at Lockheart's Happy House, caroling at the N.C. Baptist Rest Home, babysitting for faculty children, ushering for campus concerts and lectures, and many pinnings highlighted the year. Then it was "sho time, ladies and gentlemen," at the Fidele Follies which turned in a campus high of $80 for the stadium drive. How can things get better than "Fidele Heaven in '67"? Well, take a look at that new pledge class!

Bev Freeman and Sara Umstead, two characters from "Alice in Wonderland," entertain prospective pledges.

LAURELS

What a year! From football to pledges Laurels triumphed in their usual fashion to make '66-'67 another year to remember. John Snow, their sweetheart (they love you, John) coached their football and basketball teams to victories (that bubble gum really spurred them on!) and helped drum up business for Rent-a-Laurel Day.

Yes, they do almost anything. Shapely Laurels donned black stockings for the Fall Carnival to catch garters, made by the domesticated sisters, and money for the stadium. A Christmas party with the KA's ("You mean you don't believe he is Santa?"), caroling, more parties at the Johnsons, their first annual alumnae luncheon and letter, and new door plaques made them understand what "I want to be a Laurel" means. And now they become of age as their original pledge class graduates.

LES SOEURS

A big new event was added to this year's busy schedule—an annual Garter Bowl Football game between the Poteat Playboys and the Les Soeurs Bunnies. Covered by television and newspapers, the competition was a huge success. The game of football will never be the same.

The carnival also provided a time for work and fun as Les Soeurs sisters sat beneath water balloons and were drenched when bean-bag-throwers hit their mark.

A pumpkin-card serenade for the boys, the sale of doughnuts in the girls' dorms, a Christmas party for the Patterson Avenue children and tough competition for the inter-society basketball championship kept sisters busy throughout the first semester. Rush, Derby Day competition, and a cookout for graduating seniors rounded out a happy and successful year for Les Soeurs. Their memories, shared together, "will truly shine forever through the years."

S. O. P. H.

This was the year that was as SOPHS went gung-ho into their Tenth Anniversary year with Halloween Italian style, "high" times, and bankruptcy. "Rats" to the carnival—fun but no funds. Thanks to the "House that Brotherhood Built" sisters enjoyed a lively Christmas party. SOPHS excelled with three Who's Who girls and forty-five "What's That" (secretaries, student teachers, and sweethearts). Then they rushed into a new semester with "Where did you say you're from?" Spring brought competition in every field—the field behind the Sigma Chi house and the muddy Greek field.

Senioritis and spring fever hit hard, but they managed to survive by boarding the "TOG Special" every Friday. Sisters vote a very special thanks for the super-active seniors (it's hard being number one), to the naive sophomores who wanted to lend their athletic support in a unique way, to the four SOPH sisters, to Miss Casey, and to Jack Ivey, that "special someone." Even though seniors must say goodbye, underclassmen know they don't really mean goodbye, for sisterhood's something no distance can hide—S. O. P. H.

STRINGS

Would you believe—raking leaves for the faculty (blisters, anyone?), fortune-telling (of course it's for real!), selling mistletoe (any fringe benefits?), and numerous other fun-filled and rewarding experiences? Strings in '67 led by none other than "the Gunn" (she's the W.C.A. president?), with their usual winning combination of hard work and fun enjoyed another successful year.

It was a year filled with football games and parties with the fraternities. And then there was Derby Day . . . but with a new twist. Who could forget their "studly" basketball team, with the great coaching of Dave Diamond? And they said it couldn't be done.

Second semester found Strings sponsoring their second annual Glamour Contest. Then there was rush, full of hard work and, of course, typical of Strings, much fun. After all this work, Strings were rewarded with some unusually "Stringly" Threads.

The year may be over, but memories of Strings will remain. Allehman.

Regardless of the sport, the sequence is basically the same. From hard-nosed, grueling practice sessions to an occasional victory and the locker room celebration which inevitably follows, spirit plays a key role. Fired-up students at pep rallies and dedicated coaches are both instrumental in promoting all-important team spirit. Accompanying the Saturday afternoon gridiron clash—as well as any other athletic event—is the color and excitement which is embodied in tense, enthusiastic spectators whose value to the team and to any victory is truly unmeasurable. The game's aftermath—a deserted stadium—is vividly symbolic of the end of a cycle, and, paradoxically, the beginning of another.

YOUNG, SPIRITED TEAM DROPS SQUEAKERS IN DISAPPOINTING SEASON

The 1966 football season was a frustrating one for players and fans alike. In several games, the Deacons played poorly and, as a result, they were soundly defeated. On other occasions, however, they played fine football, only to have bad breaks turn the tide of the game against them. The Deacs were able to win three games, but these games were so close that few fans felt assured of a victory until the final gun went off. But, in spite of such frustration, there was hope of better things to come, as the Baby Deacs went undefeated and the recruiting program of Coach Bill Tate hit new heights.

The Deacs snap out of the huddle in a determined, yet futile, fourth quarter drive against N. C. State.

Primed to fire, the bomb is practically on its way as an Auburn defender arrives too late.

HARASSING DEFENSE ANNOYS OPPOSITION

In the season's opener, six Deacon fumbles gave Virginia a 24-10 victory at Charlottesville. Even though the Deacs amassed 342 yards of total offense, it was the Cavaliers' Bob Davis who stole the show, by passing for 206 yards. Tate called the game the worst one in his three years at Wake Forest.

The contest with Maryland the next week was no less disastrous. Mistakes and the inability to move the ball hurt the Deacs, as the Terps romped to an easy 34-7 victory.

Eager Wake fans saw the Deacons lose their home opener to N. C. State by a disappointing 15-12 margin. Wake held a 6-0 lead throughout the first three quarters, but, in the fourth quarter, the Wolf-pack struck back with two touchdowns. Then, after battling back with a 66 yard Erickson to Henry touchdown pass, Chick George missed a 25 yard field goal, and more gloom was added to a cold, rain-soaked day.

An aggressive Deacon defense hems in a speedy Auburn back.

With precision timing, Chick George boots a 40 yard field goal which proved decisive in Wake's 3-0 triumph over UNC.

Sophomore quarterback Ken Erickson breaks toward the outside on an option play while a V.P.I. defender closes in.

The expression of cheerleader Ed Barker could well be used to characterize the season—one of disappointment and anxiety.

The steady play of tackle Lynn Nesbitt, who was tabbed as a pre-season All-America candidate, was, in all respects, impressive.

MISTAKES, SPUTTERING OFFENSE CAUSE FRUSTRATION

The fourth quarter again proved to be decisive in the next three games. At Auburn, the Deacs were able to stay alive until a final quarter score set the Wake squad down for the fourth time in a row. The Deacons were almost forced into a repeat performance by South Carolina. However, a tremendous defensive effort late in the fourth quarter clinched a thrilling 10-6 victory over the Gamecocks.

The Tar Heels of UNC provided the opposition the next week, and the Deacons were ready. Chick George kicked a 40 yard field goal in the first quarter, and that proved to be the only score in the ball game. The Deacon defense, led by Don McMurry, came up with great defensive play in the fourth quarter by stopping Danny Tallot, and Homecoming in Chapel Hill was spoiled.

The confidence and determination of Head Coach Bill Tate is depicted as he views the action on the field, discusses a crucial play with a pressbox assistant, gives final instructions on a key play, and watches the result of his strategy.

On Homecoming Day, the Deacons hoped to break a couple of jinxes for Coach Tate. Tate had never won a homecoming game and he had never beaten Frank Howard's Clemson Tigers. The Deacons, down 21-7 at the half, suddenly came to life in the second half and, with just thirty seconds left in the game, they had battled to a 21-21 tie and had the ball. Erickson then attempted to throw a bomb from his own end zone and was tackled for a safety. Thus, with "a little help from Up There," the Homecoming-Clemson jinx continued.

The next week, the Deacons statistically outplayed Virginia Tech, but the Gobblers won on the scoreboard (where it counts) 11-0. The Memphis State game was a different story, however, as the Deacs made their own breaks on both offense and defense and upset the Tigers 21-7. In the season's finale, the Deacs were solidly outclassed by Florida State, 28-0.

Although it was a disappointing season, it can hardly be considered an omen of bad things to come. With a solid core of returning varsity players and with the help of some talented freshmen, the 1967 season should produce some wins.

EXPLOSIVE FROSH TROUNCE OPPONENTS . . . BABY DEACS ARE UNDEFEATED

One of Bill Tate's first acts as head football coach was to promise an ACC football championship for Wake Forest within four or five years. That was three years ago and that promise is unfulfilled. However, this year's freshman team gave hope to Deacon supporters that Tate's timetable might yet be realized. Under the direction of Coach Ken Karr, the Baby Deacs powered their way to an undefeated season, the first such perfect mark ever recorded for a freshman team at Wake Forest.

An aggressive defense provided the key to success by allowing the opposition an average of only 6.6 points a game and by consistently setting up offensive scores. Supplementing the fierce defense was a hard-running offensive unit which churned out 1,052 yards rushing and which tallied 96 points for the season. The frosh worked as a team, a fact which made their play even more outstanding.

Characterized by an abundance of ability and an attitude of confidence, the freshmen will be challenging for varsity positions in 1967. Their presence will be a powerful influence in realizing Tate's championship dreams.

The Wake freshmen, capitalizing on their outstanding running game, send Jurewicz through the middle.

BASKETBALL

PRIDE AND HUSTLE CHARACTERIZE DEACON CAGERS

Pre-season forecasts were dismal indeed for Wake Forest basketball fans, as "the experts" predicted a last-place finish for the Deacons. This was but one of the problems facing new head coach Jack McCloskey, who had inherited a team lacking in height and suffering from slack recruiting. But McCloskey and his assistants Neil Johnston and Billy Packer instilled in the Deacons a spirit of pride and hustle which helped them to fool the experts and become a decisive factor in the ACC championship race.

The Deacs were led by All-American candidate Paul Long, whose off-balance shots, offensive moves, and deadly accuracy were applauded by friend and foe alike. Jerry Montgomery, the other half of Wake's backcourt pair, also drew praise for his mid-air acrobatics and playmaking ability. Center Dave Stroupe paced the team in field goal accuracy and, along with forwards Jim Boshart and Newton Scott, led the team in rebounding. In several contests, juniors Paul Crinkley and Jimmy Broadway and sophomore Jay Randall assumed starting roles; but, more often than not, McCloskey stayed with his original starters.

Scoring leader Paul Long drives in for an uncontested lay-up in an overtime victory over Virginia Tech.

The Wake defense, which yielded on average of 77.5 points per game, stiffens in a victorious tournament effort against Clemson.

DEACONS FACE TOUGH OPPOSITION

The Deacs dropped the season's opener to Davidson, but, behind Jerry Montgomery's 20 points, bounced back to clobber State. Tenth-ranked V.P.I. was next in line, and spurred by ex-Gobbler Paul Long's fantastic play, the Deacons were able to grab an exciting upset victory in overtime. The following two games saw Wake Forest pitted against two of the nation's top teams: Cincinnati and Vanderbilt. (This was no strange situation for the Deacons, as they played what was estimated to be the third toughest schedule in the nation.) A desperation jump shot by Newton Scott fell short as the buzzer sounded to give Cincinnati a shaky 59-58 victory. Against Vanderbilt the Deacs put up a tremendous battle but fell at the hands of the mighty Commodores 88-82.

During Christmas holidays, the Deacons managed to whip Maryland 68-59, but fell victim to Duquesne, Temple, and Duke in non-conference clashes. With the season a third of the way finished, the Deacs played host to second-ranked U.N.C. What was expected to be a slaughter turned into one of the season's most exciting contests, as the towering All-America studded Carolina team had its hands full with the Deacons. It took an unbelievable play by Larry Miller in the last seconds to doom Wake Forest to a 2 point defeat.

CONFERENCE SLUMP HITS DEACS

After the disheartening defeat at the hands of Carolina, Wake bounced back to smash Virginia 84-77, as Jim Boshart bucketed a career high of 28 points. Then V.P.I. avenged its earlier defeat, and scrappy V.M.I. came within a basket of upsetting the Deacons. Suddenly, the Deacons found themselves and demolished Davidson and Clemson to round out a three game winning streak. The Deacons were 4-1 in conference play and found themselves in second place behind the Tar Heels. This position was short-lived, however, as South Carolina's Gamecocks sent the Deacs on a downhill slide of nine straight losses. This losing streak (which included over time losses to Carolina and State and a last second loss to Clemson) was the longest in over two decades at Wake Forest. The demoralized Deacons, who had played their hearts out and lost and lost and lost, finally hit the bottom with a humiliating 42 point loss to the torrid Duke Blue Devils.

MCCLOSKEY INSPIRES DISHEARTENED TEAM TO TOURNAMENT WIN

Under the inspiration of Coach McCloskey, the Deacs picked themselves up from the ground, determined to fight back and prove themselves. A changed Wake Forest basketball team hosted the unsuspecting Terrapins of Maryland in the regular season finale.

The Terrapins were outrebounded, out hustled, outshot, and outplayed, as Paul Long dumped in 25 points and led the Deacons to one of their most impressive victories of the year.

In the preliminary round of the ACC Tournament, the Deacons proved themselves again with a come-from-behind double overtime victory over the Clemson Tigers. In the tournament semifinals against U.N.C., Wake played an inspired brand of basketball and led by as many as eight points in the second half. Then, once again, Larry Miller broke loose and scored 29 points in the second half to lead the eventual ACC champions to an 89-79 victory.

BABY DEACS CAPTURE BIG FOUR CHAMPIONSHIP

This year's freshman basketball team, one of the most publicized in recent years, rounded out a highly successful season by clinching the Big Four title with an 89-85 win over Duke. Coach Neil Johnston, in his debut as a college coach, guided the frosh to an impressive 11-5 record. The Baby Deacs canned 87.9 points per game while holding the opposition to an 83.4 average.

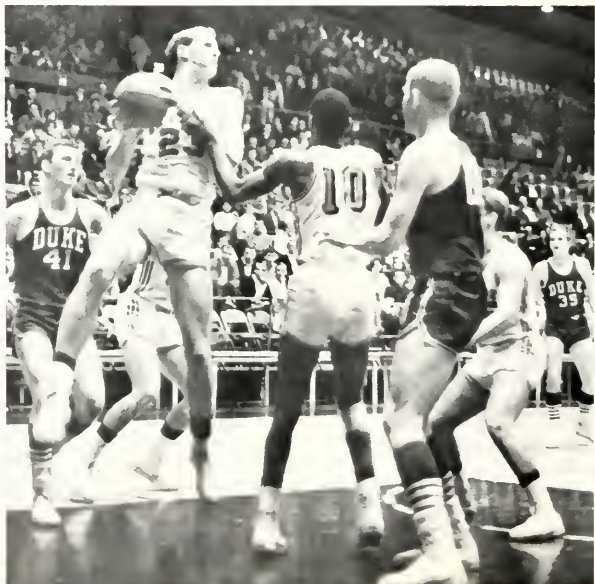

The function of any freshman team is to groom athletes for varsity competition. This year's frosh team, however, may have surpassed that objective. Individual performances were outstanding throughout the season, and toward the end of the year, precision team work helped to mold a group of outstanding players into a potentially great team.

Guard Dickie Walker led the team in scoring with a dazzling 27.6 average and in field goal percentage with a .519 mark. Norwood Todmann, the other half of the Baby Deacs highly rated backcourt pair, popped the nets for an average of 23.8 points per game. Center Dan Ackley led the team in rebounding with a 10.3 average, while forward Larry Habegger cleaned the boards at an 8.8 pace. Forward Danny Meyer and guard David Smith rounded out the "starting six."

SWIMMING

LACK OF DEPTH DOOMS TANKMEN TO SIXTH PLACE FINISH

Lacking as usual the depth of talent necessary to compete successfully in the tough Atlantic Coast Conference, Coach Leo Ellison's swimming team completed the season with a mediocre 4-8 record, and splashed to a sixth place finish in the ACC championship meet. However, the tankmen, led by Milt Ackerman and team captain Rick Sedgley, were somewhat impressive in victories over Davidson, Duke, Appalachian, and William and Mary. Also an impressive array of talented Freshmen broke several records, and are expected to greatly strengthen next year's squad.

DEPTH, HUSTLE, AND STALLINGS: ALWAYS A WINNING COMBINATION

As the crack of the bat ushered in the new season, Coach Jack Stallings fielded a squad with almost more depth than he knew what to do with. And, indeed, balance and depth turned out to be the forte of the Deacon nine as eleven lettermen returned from a squad which racked up a third place finish in the A. C. C. last year with a 12-12 overall record.

At the beginning of the season, Stallings ventured to say that "we'll have a pretty good ball club." Prophecy turned into reality as the Deacs whipped a strong Kent State team in the season's opener 3-2. The team drew heavily from last year's talented freshmen team which sported a 14-4 record, as at least five sophomores found themselves in key starting roles. In addition to the power hitting, precision pitching, and pressure defense, hustle and desire made the '67 team click.

First Baseman Barry Murphy whips the ball around in a pre-game warm up.

Bill Heitman slides safely into second—Ty Cobb-style—in action against Kent State.

SOPHOMORES STEP INTO KEY POSITIONS

The Deacs were hampered by early season injuries but wasted little time in building up steam. Heading the list of veterans were Steve Wrenn at first base, Sonny Swails at second base, Bill Myers at short stop, and Dickie Myers at the catcher position. The mound crew was headed by Steve Wrenn, Paschal Renn, Will Staples and Bob Mumford, all lettermen. Intermingled with the veterans was a group of highly talented sophomores led by slugging third baseman Digit Laughridge, centerfielder-pitcher, Jim Callison, right fielder Bob Blanton, and first baseman Barry Murphy.

The Deacs began the season by splitting a two-game series with Kent State and then headed south for the Florida State invitational tournament. Primed for action they returned to an always tough race for the A. C. C. title.

Hustle and desire were the trademarks of this year's Deacon squad.

TRACK AND CROSS COUNTRY

Al Viehman, John Hodson, and Jim Hope paced the Deacon harriers to one of the best records ever.

HARRIERS STREAK TO 7-1 RECORD

Led by Captain Al Viehman, the Wake Forest cross-country team completed one of its best seasons ever by racing to a third place finish in the ACC meet and recording a 7-1 mark in dual meet competition. Coach Keith Hamilton's squad posted impressive victories over N. C. State, Davidson, Virginia, V.P.I., Clemson, and South Carolina, while losing to only North Carolina in the regular season. The team then went on to finish in a third place tie with Duke in the State Championship Meet and placed behind only Maryland and North Carolina in the conference meet.

Viehman, who finished eighth in both meets, John Hodsdon, Jim Hope, Jim Sheffer, and Bob Duval paced the Deacon's running. Although Viehman graduates, the prospects appear favorable for the cross-country team in the future as the rest of the starting four, along with Jim Best and Stan Cambell, return.

TRACK TEAM: Row one: A Viehman, J. Hope, J. Hodson, J. Mount, J. Rainwater, J. Glasheen. Row two: W. David, C. Adams, D. Asch, R. Ashton, J. Best, B. Raisner, E. Barker, A. Stauch.

Coach Keith Hamilton confers with Al Viehman in a pre-meet warmup.

Broad-jumper Julian Rainwater paced the fieldmen with measured leaps into the pit.

Coach Keith Hamilton found many problems awaiting him last fall when he became head track coach at Wake Forest. The Deacon track team had several talented performers, but, as in the past, lack of depth promised to be the nemesis of the cindermen. Individual performances were often outstanding, and many school records, including those in the pole vault, the intermediate hurdles, and the mile, were threatened. Overall team performance, however, tended to negate many of these individual achievements.

A small number of veterans formed the nucleus of the squad. Al Viehman and John Hodsdon were outstanding in the longer running events, while Julian Rainwater excelled in the pole vault. Tom Fitch in the high jump and Joe Mount in the sprints also helped to supply the experience necessary for a balanced attack.

LINKMEN ENJOY NATIONAL SPOTLIGHT

Last year's golf team was outstanding, finishing second in the ACC with an overall 6-3 mark. However, this year the linkmen were even more dynamic—almost invulnerable. Coach Jesse Haddock had a team of great depth and almost unlimited potential.

As in most sports this year, the focus was on the sophomores, and the golf team is the most notable example. Sophomore Jack Lewis, who tied for third in the U.S. Amateur Tournament, has been acclaimed Wake's best golfer since the Palmer-Patton days. Along with Lewis, sophomore Leonard Thompson strengthened an already strong group of lettermen which included such standouts as John Buczek, John Harris, Dan Herring, and Doug Ford, Jr.

GOLF

GOLF TEAM—Row one: C. Snipes, J. Inman, D. Herring, D. Ford, Jr., J. Harris, J. Lewis. Row two: N. Swenson, C. Cowan, M. Long, J. Buczek, L. Thompson, Coach Haddock.

Row two: M. Ruhenstein, C. Pierce, E. Parker, Coach Leighton.

NETMEN HAVE DEPTH . . . BEGIN TO CLIMB

This spring Coach Jim Leighton unveiled a tennis team with perhaps the greatest potential in Wake's history. Among the six players returning from last season were lettermen Ed Parker and Rob Knapp, who ranked as the top "netmen" on last year's squad. Sophomores Mike Rubenstein and Dave Ashcraft, standouts from their freshman year, contributed added force to the strength of the squad.

Although last year's varsity posted a record of three wins and twelve losses, the freshmen completed the season with four wins, two losses, and one tie. Greater depth and new blood are the elements which assure a brighter future as Wake is, as Coach Layton has predicted, well on its way towards becoming a dangerous tennis power in the ACC.

CHEERLEADERS

On ground: Demon Deacon Dwight Gentry.

... the tense moments ...

CHEERLEADERS FIND THE BIG NEW SOUND

After a normal year of handsprings, human pyramids, tamborines and pom-poms, the Deacon cheerleading squad found a new approach to creating mass enthusiasm during the last week of the basketball season. Using Winston-Salem State cheerleaders as enthusiastic tutors in a special chapel program, the group initiated a whole new series of cheers into the Deacon tradition.

Behind the leadership of senior Ed Barker and Demon Deacon Dwight Gentry, the cheerleaders accompanied the teams on the road and raised support at home games with their traditional spirit. Because of the accomplishments of this year's squad, many new generations of Wake fans will not soon forget that "We-are-the mighty Deacs, and we-don't give-a hoot about those-Devils."

... the light moments—but seldom was there a dull one.

INTRAMURALS

Two members of Wake Forest's newest team practice their dribbling while preparing for an inter-collegiate soccer match.

An incomplete pass that can mean the difference between victory or defeat means almost as much to a Greek athlete as to be a member of the varsity team.

INTRAMURALS PROMOTE SPORTSMANSHIP, PROVIDE KEEN COMPETITION

To combat the "vicious cycle of false fatigue," the physical education department sponsors a wide range of intramural sports in which students have the opportunity to relieve tensions through highly competitive activities. Ranging from football and basketball to horseshoes and ping pong, the intramural program offers competition on both a team and an individual basis.

The intramural season began as Phi Delta Phi's Defenders captured the campus football championship with a close 13-12 win over Theta Chi. Pi Kappa Alpha took first place honors in cross-country, Kappa Alpha dominated the golf and basketball competition and Theta Chi placed first in swimming and riflery.

The Soccer Club, under the direction of Ed Wisneski, has made tremendous progress since its formation in the fall. If enthusiasm continues at its present tempo, soccer may soon be officially recognized as a varsity sport.

The action of these two grapplers is similar in intensity to that found in any of the diverse activities found in the intramural program.

The activities of the Deacon co-eds are also developed in the intramural program as seen here in field hockey play against cross-town rival Salem.

SENIORS REMEMBER . . .

Four's a common number, divisible by two and even pretty small when compared to the bigger numbers, like five hundred or three thousand. But it becomes even larger when it refers to years, months, or days. Four years becomes incredibly large. Four years between eighteen and twenty-two are even more meaningful. For over five hundred people here, these four years are gone.

It all started in the fall of 1963. It's easy to remember the first day because you knew when you arrived that you were supposed to be remembering everything that happened. So, you remember the details that your roommate had on a brown vest and his mother had on a real flower with a black and gold ribbon, probably something her husband thought would be nice. You were glad then that your mother wasn't ostentatious. Your first class and your first date were pretty much alike. Both were rather dull and uncomfortable.

Four years in the Wake Forest world, a world involved in the goings-on of other worlds . . . like the politics of national elections . . .

or Bones, and the unforgettable image he created . . .

or the conflicts with North Carolina Baptists . . .

or a President's assassination which stunned crowds in every world . . .

or balloons to spread the news of a stadium drive . . .

or the exciting basketball of All American Bob Leonard . . .

The first A in English left you on the ceiling and after you came down and made it to Winston Hall, you absorbed the D- on a lab practical with all the finesse you could muster. This wasn't much, because by then you hated your roommate and echinoderms and being a freshman. But you toughed it out. Nobody could call you maladjusted.

And the time passed and you were listed in the student handbook as a 2 and then a 3 and then you were a 4 and were supposed to be really excited about it yet you didn't know if you were or not. You didn't know if you liked it because it worried you that some things were just a haze—that you had to stop and think to remember what courses you took second semester sophomore year or why you majored in history instead of English and if you did it because you had B's in both history courses and only a B and a C in English.

and then the seemingly unending question of university status was answered in this senior year.

THE LAST OF FOUR YEARS PASSED QUICKLY

You realized in your fourth year that the weight of that first suitcase had suddenly shifted to a heavier burden and you had to make decisions and plan things in another series of years—two for grad school, three for the Army, two out for kicks before a wedding. Then you began planning your world around numbers again. "Can you guarantee me $130 starting salary?" and "Jeanne, I think three children would be enough."

You tell your father that "yes," you have grown up and your dialogue with him sounds like something you might hand to the personnel manager at Wachovia Bank. You've had a course in philosophy and religion so you've thought about self and God and everything else that may be important. You've even played a round of golf with an economics prof so you know that you'll adjust in the executive circle. You've been to Jamaica and to the Bunny Club in Atlanta, so you've acquired your share of cosmopolitanism. In a number of years you'll have a number of children and a house with a mailbox with a nice zip code number and you'll do just fine. You've had four years at Wake Forest and now you're a graduate with the answers to all the questions, except maybe one. Who am I after four?

OUTSTANDING SENIORS

Three per cent of a graduating class of five hundred and ten were elected by their classmates as Outstanding Senior Personalities early in the spring. Begun in 1957 in an effort to allow students themselves to recognize those individuals who, in the student's own opinion have made a significant contribution to the school or to the class, senior personalities this year represent publications, athletics, student government, woman's government, those outstanding in work with the Men's Residence Council or perhaps outstanding fraternity men.

To the law student the courtroom signifies a present reality and a future hope.

Serious discussion and informal conversation occupy a student's time between classes.

LAW DEGREE CHANGED FROM LL.B. TO J.D.

Beginning with spring 1967 graduates from the Wake Forest School of Law will receive the J.D. degree instead of the LL.B. degree which has been formerly given. Students and faculty began last year to plan for the change which was finally effected by the Student Bar Association. This change means that the law graduates will receive a professional doctorate in law. It will enable graduates to be given preference over holders of LL.B. degrees in government positions and in getting higher salaries.

Since its establishment in 1894, the School has been known for its high standards. The School, with its eight full-time professors, has maintained a unique smallness in which student-teacher relationships result in a beneficial closeness for both. The law student is not burdened by periodic quizzes but shows the results of his studies on comprehensive final exams, briefs and research studies. The Wake Forest Law student graduates well trained in legal principles and prepared to accept positions in the field of law.

Justice is a significant attitude that must be integrated into every prospective lawyer.

The law library is virtually a second home to all law students.

PHI ALPHA DELTA

The Wake Forest Chapter of Phi Alpha Delta law fraternity was chosen second best of the nation's 105 chapters this year. Justice Charles Winberry attributed Timberlake chapter's recognition to three major areas of activity.

The brothers sponsored a police support project which included an evaluation of training methods and a banquet honoring Winston-Salem police officers. Secondly, Phi Alpha Delta increased the number of volumes in its library to over 700 books. Monthly dinner meetings were also held throughout the year in which outstanding speakers were invited to participate.

PHI DELTA PHI

Ruffin Inn Chapter of Phi Delta Phi again maintained their high standards in academics and athletics. In addition to high standing in intramural sports, the brothers won the academic trophy for scholarship to give them the highest legal fraternity average for the fifteenth consecutive year.

The fraternity is also planning to extend its community-wide activities. In addition to their annual Christmas party for under privileged children, the brothers are making plans to initiate a big brother system for teenage boys in Winston-Salem. The system will include high school age boys who have had minor trouble with the law.

GRADUATION MARKS AN END AND A BEGINNING

Hurriedness represses what nostalgia most graduates feel as they don the traditional black gown and mortar board. The endless black lines with hands extended to receive a small white representation of four years' work carry a certain finality with them with their very movement.

Graduate school may lie ahead for over a third, but for the majority, formal education has ended. A dominant tie will be severed with graduation as each must take up his life apart from the closeness and carefree atmosphere of the college campus.

Over fifty per cent of this class will seek jobs and about one fifth of that number will serve in the military. Of those working, fifty-three per cent will remain in North Carolina and half that number in Winston-Salem and Forsyth County.

The class of 1967, like the College itself, has weathered challenge and change, made progress in maturity and growth, and has begun development of a personal identity.

Long lines of black-clad graduates file along a grassy path amid smiling faces.

The ceremonies seem endless but each waiting candidate is rewarded with a diploma.

Spectating was tiring and the sun was hot, but the solution was simple.

With a diploma in one hand and a five year old by the other, a happy father hurries away.

SPRING MEANS LEAVING

Whether you leave Wake Forest remembering the football season that passed with only one victory, the girl who sat next to you in chapel who later wore your fraternity pin, or the sheer delight of an eight o'clock TTS class, the year or years here have had some direct effect on your life. The dread that your "C" average would never come faded with seniority that finally came after your freshman year. You learned the ropes.

As the football afternoons of each fall have passed into winters filled with rush, long hours of last-minute study, and often discontent, the springs have regularly been filled with beach week ends, the sounds of pre-dawn mowers in motion, and for many, the anticipation of the long-awaited diploma.

As changed the seasons, each with its special memories, so you have changed. You have grown and developed according to your varied influences and interests. Your separate paths have been of your own choosing, your decisions self-made. What you have done in the years at Wake Forest will determine to some extent what you will do with your life.

The years here have been a time for adjustment to adulthood, a time for hurt and disappointment, a time for re-evaluation. But they have also been a time for love, for friendship and for understanding.

Because you were here and not at Carolina or Duke or State, you have changed in accordance with the temperament of this college, the people here, the way of life that is uniquely Wake Forest. That path has, indeed, made a difference.

SAM is a know-it-all

SAM is the Sentinel Answer Man—a reader service of the Twin City Sentinel.

Readers can ask SAM questions by telephoning his special number, or by writing him. SAM chooses the questions of general interest and answers them in his column.

What was the first religious group to settle in North Carolina? (Church of England). What country owns the Rock of Gibraltar? (England). What does the J stand for in the R. J. Reynolds name? (Joshua).

These are some typical questions and answers in SAM's column—one of the most popular reader services to come along in recent years.

It's just another of the many ways in which the Winston-Salem Journal and Sentinel newspapers render community service to Winston-Salem and Northwest North Carolina.

Our special appreciation to Dr. David Smiley for the loan of several color slides used in the opening section of the book.

Assembling three hundred and forty pages of yearbook must be quite like giving birth to a child . . . painful, time-consuming, and a definite joint effort. For the end result in both, however, the work and waiting are worth it. Paths have been the theme of the '67 book. They have been represented sometimes physically, often curricularly, but primarily, if this book has succeeded editorially, the paths are subtle experiences, decisions, and memories that comprised this year at Wake Forest.

If you happened to walk down Pub Row this year, at any given time you might have seen two or more people playing ball in the hall, taking a break from a break, you probably heard a radio blasting very loudly, and if you chanced there late at night, the clicking of typewriters on the move or unintelligible voices in frantic screams might have caught your attention. This group therapy produced a different type of book. We hope it's an improvement, but that is for your judgment. It has not been the work of one pair of hands or of one mind, but has developed from the personalities and emotions of the variety of people who have frequented 228 and 229 Reynolda Hall this year.

There are numbers of people who deserve recognition for making my job easier. You can see most of them pictured on the two HOWLER pages in the Organizations section. Those who are not there belong primarily to other publications and were responsible for a great many intangibles. The photographers, well, were it not for them you would have had a ten page booklet of terrible copy. R. J. Reynolds must take some credit, as his cigarettes, along with occasional trips to the TOG, held staff nerves in check. To Cathy and Brooks, to Pridge, Ralph and Ginny, and to Henry, special merit badges are awarded for many things.

If we had it to do over again, the book would be quite different, for neither people nor Wake Forest remain the same from day to day. Both are on the move and ever-changing. It is our hope that we've caught the moves and the changes in this story of Wake Forest, 1967.
